Peruvian President Says His Forces Were Attacked, Are Fighting Defensively.

BULLETIN

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador — (U P) —Frontier dispatches reported today that Peruvian artillery was bombarding the Ecuadorian village of Haquillas as Ecuador and Peru engaged in undeclared war.

(By United Press)

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador — Ecuador and Peru engaged in undeclared war along their frontier today, shattering the peace of the western hemisphere and frustrating the efforts of the United States, Argentina, and Brazil to mediate their century-old border dispute.

Patriotic demonstrations swept Ecuador. President Arroyo Rio, in a fervent manifesto, called upon the people to rally around the flag and pledged his government to "comply with its obligations without weakness or timidity."

The fighting began on the frontier Saturday, was intensified yesterday, continued today. Artillery and airplanes were engaged. The government, in a statement, charged that Peruvian forces had attacked Ecuadoran border guards, invading Ecuadoran territory, and had been the aggressors throughout.

(The Peruvian government charged in Limba, the capital, that Eucadoran forces had been the aggressors throughout and said Peruvian forces had fought defensively only.)

The outbreak of fighting was another in a long series of skirmishes, battles, and wars between Ecuador and Peru that date back almost 100 years over a strip of territory along their border which both claim.

Only on May 15, both Ecuador and Peru accepted the good offices of the United States, Ar-

Convict Workers Strike For Double Pay For Overtime

LEAVENWORTH, Kas.—(AP)—Federal penitentiary factories making shoes and brushes for the army were shut down today as prison officials investigated a strike by 1,100 convict workers.

The work stoppage was begun last Thursday by prisoners demanding increased pay, double time for overtime, additional good behavior time to apply on sentences and protesting a work week increase from 39 to 44 hours.

Warden R. H. Hudspeth said the plants would remain closed under orders of J. D. Bennett, director of the bureau of prisons at Washington, pending completion of an investigation.

TULSA, Okla.—(AP)—One week after adopting a hungry hound dog, Joseph T. Lantry, city purchasing agent, has evacuated his office—temporarily he hopes.

"First we thought it was the itch," said Lantry. "Then we found millions of tiny fleas crawling all over us."

If spraying hasn't cleared the fleas away today, an exterminator will be called in. Meantime, the office will remain evacuated.

Promises to Seek Law on Horn Blowing

Councilman Says He Will Sponsor Ordinance to Curb Auto Noise.

Following on the heels of a suggestion by Frank Beverstock, Richland County Auto club secretary, that drivers attempt to drive 500 miles without using their horns, George C. Kyle, city councilman, today added his voice to those of other Mansfielders seeking to quiet unnecessary horn blaring

Kyle said that at the August meeting of the city council, he would propose an ordinance modeled after ordinances in New York and Memphis which will make unnecessary "tooting" a misdemeanor punishable by at least a $5 fine.

Dan Cupid, the councilman continued, could probably be charged with a large amount of the noise in the residential sections. Kyle believes that entirely too many of the gentle calls of love were emiting from high-powered klaxon horns of young swains who, instead of ringing the young ladies' doorbell, lean forward on their horns and blast the door down. Kyle said that this was not only in poor taste, but also probably did the young man NO good with the young ladies' fathers.

Kyle's announcement was the second direct reaction from the unprecedented traffic jam in the downtown section on the night of July 3, in which motorists set up a deafening din.

Beverstock's suggestion was the first. In calling for a pledge by motorists to drive 500 miles without touching the horn button, he explained that the idea was originated by the American Automobile association in Washington, with which the Richland county club is affiliated. There, he said, drivers became more cautious, and in addition to the reduction in noise, there was a reduction in the number of accidents.

When the ordinance is introduced, however, it will draw but luke warm if any support from Councilman C. N Shultz, who says that he doesn't drive and that blarings, even three-toned blarings, do not bother him particularly.

"Let the boys who drive," he said, "bother about it."

Anti-horn ordinances and a drive inaugurated by New York City's fiery little mayor, Fiorello LaGuardia, were first laughed at, but later quieted the metropolis to such an extent that they were considered a blessing, Kyle remarked.

FOUR YEARS OF WAR IN CHINA

This map is a year-oy-year record of the Sino-Japanese war that started four years ago when Japanese and Chinese troops clashed at the Marco Polo bridge near Peiping. Japanese penetration has been largely along railroads and rivers, thus the narrow strips denoting Japanese-held territory. Between the strips are areas where Chinese guerillas, and sometimes regular army units, are able to operate.

Warns Of Deadline To Register For August Primaries

Mansfielders must register or report address changes to the Richland county board of elections by next Monday night to be eligible to vote in the Aug 12 primary, election board officials warned today.

Registrations have been slow in recent weeks, indicating little interest in the municipal primary next month, it was said.

The election board office, in the basement of the courthouse, is open from 8:30 a. m. to 4 p. m. daily except Saturday. It closes at noon on Saturday.

At the close of the last registration period preceding the November election last year approximately 21,000 persons were registered, setting an all-time high in the city. A few of them have been removed from the lists since then.

Prospective voters who will be 21 by Aug. 12, recently naturalized citizens, persons who have moved into the city recently, and those who have failed to vote at general elections for the past two years must register to become qualified voters.

Change of address since the November, 1940, election, also must report to the election board by next Monday.

Holiday Week-End Brings Death to 34 in Ohio; Nation's Toll Set at 628.

Mansfield police today began an investigation of the tragic death of Mrs. Anna Elizabeth Springer, 25, Mansfield mother who was struck down Saturday night while walking with her children by an auto which mounted the curb after a collision.

Her death was Mansfield's sole contribution to the Fourth of July holiday week-end which brought death to at least 34 Ohioans. The national violent death toll rose to a grand total of 628 deaths, 244 occuring in traffic accidents. California led the list with 67 while New York was runner-up with 41.

Three other traffic accidents in the Mansfield area brought injuries to six other persons. The condition of three persons injured in the same accident which killed Mrs. Springer were reported as "unchanged" today.

Police Chief Meade K. Bates announced that he had started an investigation of the collision which caused Mrs. Springer's death and that "definite action" would be taken.

"Someone was to blame," said Bates, "either for crashing a traffic light or for careless and reckless driving."

Mrs Springer was killed when an auto driven by Charles McKinney, 215 Miller street, ran over the sidewalk at the northwest corner of North Adams and Fourth streets after colliding with another auto driven by Russell R. Rinehart of Mansfield R. D. 3

202 STRANDED

Ship Runs Aground In Rapids of St. Lawrence River.

MONTREAL—(U P)—The treacherous currents of the St. Lawrence river rapids forced suspension of efforts to remove 202 passengers from the stranded steamer, Rapids Prince, today after a small boat had removed four men.

Authorities decided that the currents were running too fast to risk taking passengers off in small boats. It may be possible to get them out later, or ropes may be rigged to an island 100 yards away.

The Rapids Prince was fast aground in the Lachine rapids of the St. Lawrence river within sight of Montreal, and her passengers had spent the night aboard her, dancing, singing, and generally making merry.

Officials of the Canada Steamship company, owner of the boat, said they never had been in danger.

Nazis Reported Using Wooden Tanks as Ruse

Germans Claim To Have Broken Stalin Line But Offer No Details, As Russians Assert They Are On Offensive All Along Front.

(By Associated Press)

Adolf Hitler's invasion armies were reported to have "broken" the Stalin line today, but the Russians declared army troops had blocked the Nazi offensive along the whole front and driven the Germans back in five sectors.

The Soviet high command said Russian troops had seized the offensive in heavy fighting from the Baltic to the Black Sea, smashing the Germans along the Berezina river and hurling back a Nazi drive aimed at the north flank of the Stalin line.

DNB (official German news agency) asserted German troops had "broken" the line, which runs 75 miles deep in some places. No details were given.

Equally vague, the German radio said German columns had pierced the line at Several points.

The Russians reported officially that the Germans were using wood-and-canvas tanks to pad out their Panzer columns, described as self-propelling and carrying machine guns.

CIVILIANS DON'T FLEE FROM WAR

There Are No Fugitives From Combat Areas, Stoics Stay at Ordinary Tasks.

(Editor's Note: Civilian life in the German-Russian war zone is described in this dispatch by Alvin J. Steinkopf, a member of the Associated Press staff in Berlin, who is touring the front as a guest of the German high command.)

By ALVIN J. STEINKOPF

JAROSLAW, Occupied Poland—(Delayed)—(AP)—Germany's eastdrive against Russia is a war without fugitives. Armies dominate the scene and civilian populations are incidental.

Civilians sit at the doors of their cottages and watch the war roll by.

In this respect, the war against Russia is totally different from the war in Belgium and France, where every highway was jammed with civilians aimlessly trying to get here or there.

But in the east, the stoic population doesn't care one way or another. The farmer remains on his acres and the merchant remains in his shop.

Last week a merchant in the former Russian sphere of influence was selling cigarets for Russian rubles. Today he takes the Polish zloty or the German mark—and the small affairs of life are carried on as bravely as possible in the topsy-turvy world.

A curious sight in this region is

Mansfield Boy, 5, Hurled 15 Feet By Explosion; Recovers

Hurled nearly 15 feet by a gas explosion on North Franklin avenue yesterday afternoon, Clarence Thompson, five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Thompson, of 86 East Dickson avenue, was recovering today from cuts, bruises and burns about the head.

Police said that the child was playing on the sidewalk in front of 68 North Franklin avenue and had probably lighted a match near a gas valve in the walk. An explosion, described by a witness as sounding like two autos crashing together, occurred throwing the child against the building. His face was blackened by smoke accompanying the blast.

Ben Boals, jr., of 220 Summit avenue, who is employed at Page's dairy at 73 North Franklin avenue,, said that he heard the blast and saw the boy thrown from the gas valve. Boals, assisted by Bob Enoe, a fellow worker and William Martin, Shiloh, who was working nearby, carried the boy to the dairy where he was given first aid and later removed to General hospital for treatment.

Service employes of the Ohio Fuel Gas company said that they had not been informed of the blast and that an investigation would be made to discover whether the gas valve was the property of the company.

Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton said that the city would also investigate the gas valve to discover whether it was unprotected and offered any menace to citizens.

COAL CONTRACT SIGNED, DEFENSE WORRY LIFTED

CIO and Southern Operators Reach Agreement After 4-Month Negotiation.

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON — One major source of worry for directors of the defense effort—the threat of another work stoppage in the soft coal industry—was out of the way today.

CIO's United Mine Workers and operators of southern mines signed yesterday a two-year contract, arrived at after four months of negotiations. The agreement was reached less than 48 hours before a scheduled cessation of production by the miners.

The contract, essentially the same as one previously signed by northern mine owners, provides for a $7 basic daily wage, thus eliminating a 40 cents a day wage differential enjoyed by the southerners in a contract which expired April 1. Under the old contract they paid $5.60 and the northern operators $6.

Covered in the agreement are mines in southern West Virginia, Virginia eastern Kentucky and Tennessee. The UMW had threatened to refuse to work beginning tomorrow unless these signed.

Soft coal mines reopened in May after an April shutdown, with northern workers receiving $7 a day and those in the south $6.60. The new contract, however is retroactive to April 1 and the southern miners will receive 40 cents extra for every day worked since then.

Meanwhile, failure of the management and a union at an ammunition plant to settle differences which led to a strike threat gave the defense mediation board an urgent job today.

AFL's chemical workers union at Joe Alton, Ill. plant of the Western Cartridge company asked the board yesterday to take supervision of bargaining negotiations. Fred Cuis, AFL organizer, contended the company was stalling, but management spokesmen said progress was being made.

Cuis said after at a union mass meeting that the workers representatives were willing to resume negotiations without waiting for the board to act if the company would maintain in "good faith". There was no immediate indication whether the management would accept the offer.

The union had planned to strike last midnight but pulls off when the mediation board persuaded both sides to continue bargaining.

85 DIE AS BOLT LEVELS THEATER

Crowd Panicked By Fire In Mexican City, Piles Up at Exits.

GUADALAJARA, Mexico — At least 85 persons were reported killed and 11 injured seriously last night when lightning struck a crowded movie-part-time theater, causing the audience to stampede for the exits.

Most of the victims were trampled in the struggle to escape from the building which caught fire and collapsed. Authorities estimated that 2,000 persons were in the theater when the lightning struck during the midst of a heavy wind and rain storm.

Firemen, police and soldiers aided in removing bodies to the city morgue which was stormed by several thousand frantic citizens seeking to learn the whereabouts of relatives. Whole families were reported to have perished in some instances.

First accounts said all lights in the theater went out shortly before the lightning struck. The audience was sitting quietly waiting for the show to be resumed when the lightning hit near the stage with a blinding flash.

In the ensuing panic many of those in the balcony leaped over the rail to the first floor in an effort to escape.

A hurried reckoning showed the fatalities included 37 women, 30 men and 18 children.

PRICE-FIXING, ARMY CHANGES TO FACE FIRE

Congressional Leaders Confer With Roosevelt, Warn Him of Opposition to Moves.

By International News Service

WASHINGTON — Democratic leaders in congress are expected to inform President Roosevelt today that major legislative battles lie ahead on two far reaching proposals if they are pressed to a decision.

These are price-fixing and the recommendation of Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, that the army be given authority to send troops any place in the world and to keep draftees, guardsmen and reserves in training for more than one year.

With congress reconvening today after a brief respite, the "big four" congressional leaders were scheduled for a conference at the White House.

The sharp division of opinion over Gen. Marshall's proposals is evident from criticism voiced by senators and representatives who usually support the administration in all major legislative fights.

Six administration senators, who dislike Gen. Marshall's proposals but may support them, said privately that either Mr. Roosevelt himself must make a statement to the nation on the emergency, or Gen. Marshall must show necessity for his proposals in secret sessions with military affairs committees.

Strong opposition to price-fixing was voiced by "farm bloc" members, with a senate agriculture subcommittee scheduled to open hearings this week on a resolution to make price-fixing until congress can pass on the question.

The senate is expected today to confirm nomination of Attorney General Robert H. Jackson for the supreme court after a fight staged by Sen. Tydings (D., Md.) Republican members of the judiciary committee supported the nomination.

The house faces a bitter fight tomorrow on the Reynolds-May bill which, in addition to deferring men reaching 28 by July 1 from the draft, contains far-reaching anti-strike provisions.

Organized labor bombarded the house with opposition to the amendments, which include provisions for criminal penalties for pickets threatening violence, permitting government seizure of plants in labor disputes and denying wages to workers ousted in government seizure of plants.

Devereaux, Ace Flood Forecaster, 67, Dies In Cincy

CINCINNATI —(AP)— William Charles Devereaux, 67, whose science cheated raging Ohio river floodwaters of much toll in life and property in 1913 and 1937, died last night.

Senior meteorologist at the U. S. weather bureau at Abbe observatory since May 1, 1911, Devereaux made his last weather forecast June 27.

Ill for many months with an intestinal ailment, he died at Good Samaritan hospital which he entered last Wednesday.

The veteran weatherman was regarded as the nation's number one flood forecaster. In 1937 when an 80-foot-high mass of muddy destruction swirled through this part of the Ohio river valley, he worked day and night predicting expected rise of the water.

His predictions gained valuable hours over disaster for stricken valley residents.

Devereaux was a member of the American Meteorological society, the Geophysical Union, and the Ohio Academy of Science.

Principales: Don Ameche, Mary Martin, Oscar Levant, Virginia Dale, Barbara Jo Allen, Raymond Walburn, Elizabeth Patterson, Jerome Cowan, Connie Boswell, Rochester.

Hollywood has time and time again Miss Boothe's play, then turn it into a musical. It has happened to "Three Cheers for Love" and "Dixie" and a dozen others. Now comes "Kiss the Boys Goodby" and Hollywood has a stage production question for the same movie-to-play-to-movie treatment. That is what is important. What we're a shame we're that a very funny play has become a somewhat less funny picture.

"Kiss the Boys Goodby" has plenty of laughs, but it appears to suffer the fate which it is familiar with as The appealing Mary Martin, her voice, talent and to the fore makes a capital Cinderella. Donna Reed, Oscar Levant and Connie Boswell are delightful. Georgia-born Virginia Dale, who was leaves Broadway for the Betty Grable role, is a find. WPA RESUMES JOB AT SHELBY

Work Under Way Again on Widening of Street In City's Down Town.

SHELBY—Some 50 WPA employes today resumed work on the widening project for Main street downtown after a lay off of the past week awaiting the new appropriation of federal funds for WPA.

With the addition of some 15 men transferred to the project today from other county WPA projects completed recently, two shifts will be used on the job, Boyd Wierman of Mansfield, city engineer on the job, revealed.

Only 35 men had been employed on the project originally but 15 more men were added to the project's labor rolls today to rush the work to completion.

Wierman estimated that the excavation crew would complete about 250 feet of work a day, while the second shift will pour the cement for the street and curb at a daily rate of 150 feet.

Before the addition of the new men to the project, only one shift was used. The excavation work was done first and then the crew had to drop this type of work to pour the cement.

Your driving habits can save up to 20% of your gasoline!

Here's where you save... and save for defense, too!

The way you use your accelerator may be costing you more than you expect—as much as 20% of your gasoline! That's important today—for more-miles-per-gallon means more gallons for defense.

By holding your foot steady on the accelerator you save gasoline... By driving at the economical speeds up to 45 miles per hour you save more gasoline... By shifting your gears a little less often, you save still more.

But your big saving comes by not shoving your accelerator to the floor when you want to pick up speed quickly.

Fortunately, Ohio's favorite, SOHIO X-70, is both a peppy gasoline and a long-mileage gasoline. So, you can get both performance and mileage by using it regularly.

THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY (OHIO)

WHY X-70 IS A LONG-MILEAGE GAS:

1 24 improvements since 1935 keep X-70 Ohio's leading economy gasoline.

2 285,000 tests a year by Standard Oil engineers constantly maintain X-70's leadership.

3 Mileage-minded Ohio car owners buy more long-mileage X-70 than the next three brands combined!

"Rome was not built in a day"—nor was London, or Berlin, for that matter.

Some people have the odd idea that anybody who doesn't want to submit to the war-makers is a war monger.

According to Felix Frankfurter, "The business of America is civilization"—and steps in that direction should be taken as soon as possible.

Make Streets and Sidewalks Safer

THERE is at least a chance that the tragic occurrence of last Saturday evening, at the intersection of East Fourth and North Adams streets, may have an awakening effect on Mansfield's city administration, police department, motorists, and the general public, sufficient to correct some of the atrocious driving practices indulged in on Mansfield streets.

Without entering into the circumstances associated with the Saturday evening fatality, in which a woman was killed and two small children seriously injured as the result of a collision in which one car careened onto the sidewalk on which they were standing, it may be said that such an accident would have been impossible in a city where reasonable traffic regulations are ENFORCED and where all motorists exercise care in driving.

Even the conflict of statements as to which of the drivers involved in the collision "had the green light" is understandable after observing the quite general Mansfield habit of going through intersections during the amber period of change, and also interpreting the amber interval as a "go" signal, after stopping for the red light.

This is one of the things that has increased the danger of driving on Mansfield streets, and also added to the hazards of pedestrians in crosswalks—who are legally entitled to right-of-way after they have made a start across the street, but who are frequently endangered by "jack-rabbit" starts and the right or left turns of ignorant, impudent or careless motorists.

The attitude of Mansfield's administration, city council, police department, and a considerable percentage of the public, has been lethargic toward adoption and enforcement of modernized traffic regulations. Such a frightful occurrence as that of Saturday evening presents in a forceful way the actual and potential danger of official laxity and public complacency. Mansfield streets—and sidewalks—can be made much safer if there is concerted action in that direction.

Railroads Again Prospering

FIGURES for May show American railroads with the best financial return, both gross and net, since the same month in 1930. Consequently rail stocks are up.

Here is a situation which the public, as well as owners and managers of railroads, can view with satisfaction. The railroads have come back from a situation which many investors and observers feared might be fatal. There is a transformed system far better than it was in the last war.

Locomotives, cars, roadbeds, rails, bridges, the whole material equipment and also the management, have been overhauled, modernized and made ready for the emergency that has now arrived. The "rails" appear today as one of our most effective national assets and defenses in a crisis that strains every resource of production and transportation. Their increased efficiency may be seen any day, anywhere, in the immensely longer trains, more capacious cars, and the speed and safety with which they operate.

Make Sure Your Flag Is Clean

ALMOST as important as displaying the flag on a patriotic holiday is the matter of having a clean flag to hang out.

The fact that a number of flags seen in Mansfield last Friday were soiled and grimy must be attributed to thoughtlessness or carelessness rather than disrespect.

Suggestion of the National Flag association is that soiled or torn flags be washed or repaired and that "soiled, torn or badly faded flags should not be displayed."

The habit of putting a flag away, after it has been taken down, and not getting it out again until the morning of the day on which it is to again be displayed, probably accounts for much of the neglect in having flags laundered or repaired.

Now, while the subject is in mind, would be a good time to inspect your flag—so that it can be cleaned, repaired or replaced, if it is in bad condition, before there is another occasion to display it.

Helpful Radio Amateurs

RADIO "hams," the licensed short-wave operators, have often proved their usefulness and courage in emergencies. During the severe floods on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers a few years ago they stayed on the job night and day and greatly facilitated rescue work and message-sending.

That they would be just as devoted and useful in case of war may be taken for granted. In fact, they are already rendering good service by reporting any suspicious matters they pluck out of the air.

Amateurs are on the air at all hours of the day and night, so there is always some one listening and alert. It would be almost impossible for any message to be entirely missed, and everything unusual or suspicious is reported promptly. This is an important service.

Filipinos Have Fighting Force

THERE needn't be so much worry about the Philippines, according to statements from Edward Meade Earl, a Princeton professor who has been looking into this matter. It is probably true that if Japan enters the war and strikes southward for Singapore, the British stronghold on the tip of southeastern Asia, she could hope for success only if she overcame the Philippines first. But the Filipinos themselves, he insists, would have something to say about that.

He considers the Filipinos "in every personal respect the equal of the Japanese," and they have an army. That army is patriotic. With or without American help, it could probably give a good account of itself.

One writer has an idea that "in a perfect world nobody would have to work in the summer time"—but another considers the last four words superfluous.

"Benito" means "blessed" but the name by which most people call the Duce now is just the opposite of that.

THE INVOLUNTARY PASSENGER

U. S. Pilots Already In the War

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—It is not being shouted from the housetops, but a good many of our army aviators are already in the "shooting" war. There are the pilots recently sent as "observers" to China, and a much larger number "observing" in Britain. It may be denied that they functioned as did the newspaper man who got in so bad in the first World war by shooting a gun from a German trench, but if anyone thinks they are not doing a bit of shooting as well as piloting, that person could be classed as a dillble.

One of the things now being urged inside the administration is that we provide a "larger" number of military pilots to fly planes across Africa. Note the word "larger." It is the word used by officials in explaining what they want done. In other words, some military pilots of the U. S. forces are already in this work.

The planes are destined for Egypt and Syria—primarily for the defense of the Suez Canal. It takes so long to take them across the Pacific and Indian oceans, and up into the Red Sea, that the shorter route across the Atlantic to Africa is being used. That involves a long flight from just under the western hump of Africa northeasterly to Cairo.

Actually the planes fly almost straight east to the line so long established by the Cape to Cairo airline, and then follow the established airline up to Cairo. This route enables them to take advantage of the existing fueling and other facilities established by this commercial line long before the war started.

* * *

WHAT is suspected is that a good many of our aviators who start in to do this trans-African ferrying job will wind up shooting at Nazi planes.

It is frankly admitted that the British situation in Egypt is very serious, even with the Russians fighting the Nazis. But before Hitler decided to attack the Reds the British position near the Suez was almost desperate.

This is why, in a way of speaking, the Washington administration got a little ahead of schedule in its slow progress toward a shooting war. President Roosevelt was desperately anxious to do everything possible to prevent the Germans taking Egypt. There was no way of stepping up delivery of planes to the British by the Pacific-Indian ocean and Red Sea route, so this plan of ferrying them across Africa was set in motion. The use of military pilots was the next step.

All of the sentiment in administration circles in Washington is to speed up help, rather than slow down as a result of the war in Russia. Conviction here is that the present situation offers an opportunity which may not come again for years, and successfully taking advantage of it may spell the difference between a two or three year war and a nine or ten year war.

* * *

THERE is no longer any hope of starving the Germans out. As a matter of fact there never was much basis for any such hope. The Germans were not starved out in the last war. Confidential investigators for Herbert Hoover reported that just before the end of the last war, in 1918, the Germans had enough food, and were not facing any famine. Their diet was not what the average German wanted, of course. It was a hardship, in that sense, but there was no danger of anyone starving, much less the army and navy.

What beat the Germans in the last war was failure of the kaiser's promise to the German people that he would win the war before American troops could get to Europe. When the Germans found out American troops were fighting in the front lines they knew that promise was pie crust.

More About Infantile Paralysis

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

INFANTILE paralysis is one of the few contagious diseases that prevail more in the summertime than the winter. And a number of recent speculations and observations seem to indicate a reason for this.

For a good many years health officers and epidemiologists generally have had a hunch that an attack of infantile paralysis had something to do with swimming, or bathing outdoors in river, lake or ocean.

I had an experienced health officer once argue with me, or rather explain to me, for hours, that chilling of the body in cold water caused it. He was a thoroughly modern physician, not a crank, and he knew perfectly well, of course, that some kind of a germ causes such diseases, but he felt that exposure and cold water precipitated the attack, and he cited several instances to prove it.

Paralysis and Exercise.

Some support for his view was officially given by Dr. Albert Bruce Sabin, of Cincinnati, to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis this spring.

Dr. Sabin put the idea more broadly and warned against violent exercise of any kind in the summer when one has a headache, a stiff neck or nausea. The virus of infantile paralysis may invade the nervous system and cause only these vague symptoms. A mild case may be overcome by body resistance without the development of any paralysis, if rest and care are instituted. But exercise may stir up the virus, spread it through the nervous system and precipitate a real attack.

Another explanation which applies to swimming alone is offered in the work of Drs. Paul and Trask, of New Haven, Connecticut, that the virus of infantile paralysis is found in sewage and that bathing in contaminated river, lake or ocean water will expose an individual to contagion. Several epidemics have been studied in which it could be proved that the victims were so exposed and that water near the outlet of a sewer was responsible.

Three Investigation Periods.

There have been three periods in the investigation of the transmission of infantile paralysis. First was the work, represented by the studies of Claverly and Wickman that pointed to direct human contact with persons having a mild form of the disease as a mode of transmission—and undoubtedly this obtains.

Second, the contributions of Landsteiner and Flexner and associates show that direct transmission could be made experimentally to monkeys. And third, this epidemiologic study which indicates that infantile paralysis may often be a water-borne disease.

Nearly every summer there is a local mild or severe epidemic somewhere in the United States or Canada. Perhaps with this new knowledge in hand, boards of health will be in a better position to engage in active preventive work.

U. S. Experts Agree With Wavell, Urge New Defense In Mid-Africa

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Inside story on General Wavell's transfer to India, as told in diplomatic dispatches, is that Wavell had been quarreling with Churchill and had opposed political-military moves such as the campaign in Greece and Crete and the expedition to Solum.

More important from the American point of view, Wavell had favored the evacuation of all British forces from the entire Mediterranean area. And U. S. military experts agreed with him—in fact, urged it.

So although in a sense General Wavell is being demoted, yet in other respects he will be in a position to command British forces from an area to which he had urged that British forces retreat.

For some time General Wavell had contended that Britain's position in the Mediterranean was indefensible. The British force of only 400,000 men in the Near East faced a combined Axis total twice as strong—400,000 Germans and Italians in Libya, plus 600,000 Nazis in Greece, Bulgaria and Rumania.

The latter figure has been partially diminished by transfers to Russia; but Wavell argued that the Nazi-Fascist armies could concentrate attack in one place while British troops had to spread out over a far-flung line from Libya to Syria and Iraq. Therefore he disagreed with Churchill on all military moves which had a political motive.

* * *

Worried Over Atlantic.

UNITED STATES military and naval strategists sided with Wavell, were strong for the idea of a complete British withdrawal from the Mediterranean. The strategy behind this was twofold:

1. The British have lost 40 per cent of their original Mediterranean fleet. The losses at Crete were much worse than officially admitted, and even in the Syrian campaign naval losses were considerable. Therefore, American naval men, facing the probability of having to help the British fleet in the Atlantic, did not want the fleet further weakened.

2. The United States is more interested in what happens on the bulge of Africa around Dakar (opposite Brazil) than it is in the Mediterranean.

To this end, both General Wavell and U. S. strategists favored the idea of withdrawing British forces from the Mediterranean entirely and establishing a new line of defense across the very center of Africa—from Port Sudan on the Red Sea to Freetown, on the Atlantic Ocean.

This line of defense meant that about 1,500 miles of the hottest desert in the world would be between the Nazis and the British lines. Over such a desert it is difficult for tanks to operate without heating up; also it is difficult for the average bomber to carry a load over such distances. So it was expected that the Nazis would exhaust themselves in the deep, hot deserts of Africa.

Part of the plan contemplated a highway straight across equatorial Africa from Freetown and later from Dakar to Port Sudan.

* * *

Churchill Says No.

HOWEVER, Churchill was flatly opposed. So were many other British leaders. They felt that the shock of withdrawal from the Mediterranean, traditional sphere of British influence, and from Suez which had been identified with the British Empire for years, would be too much for the British public.

This debate occurred before the Nazi attack on Russia and before the British march into Syria. But after the slowness of Wavell's success in Syria, all these factors culminated in his transfer to India.

There Wavell can concentrate on defense of the most important part of the Empire—if the Nazis creep up on the Indian border in South Russia. Also, he will not be in the Mediterranean, for the defense of which he had no great enthusiasm.

Note—In view of present U. S. demands for a separate air force, it is interesting to note that one of General Wavell's rows with London was over the fact that the British army, navy and air force all were under different commands, each commander doing what he thought best. Wavell could not command the naval or air forces to correlate their efforts with his. They cooperated with him, but if there was disagreement, they, not he, made the final choice.

"Mr. Smith" Leaves.

EDWIN L. SMITH, left-wing member of the national labor relations board, will not be reappointed when his term expires next month.

Long under fire from the AFL and at loggerheads with the other two members of the board, Smith is definitely slated for replacement. The White House tried to ease him out last year when the NLRB underwent a housecleaning, but Smith refused to quit. He insisted on filling out his term, and since it would have taken a fight to remove him, the matter was dropped.

But now that his term is finished, Smith knows he is on the way out. At an NLRB staff meeting last week he remarked that it was probably the last time he would address them. CIO insiders predict that he will get a job on the staff of John L. Lewis, with whom Smith is on close terms.

Topping the list of likely successors is John J. McDonough, prominent Boston attorney. A leading New England liberal, McDonough once was regional director of the WPA and for many years a member of the Massachusetts state labor board. He is an old friend of Harry Hopkins and has a wide acquaintance in labor ranks.

WASHINGTON — Answering the mail orders:

D. C. S., Akron, Ohio — Vice-President Henry Wallace is not only proving a capable and popular presiding officer in the senate, but there is a rumor he may get another job—a big one—co-ordinator of the new defense-agency-to-be, the bureau of economic warfare. If it should happen, Wallace would be a compromise selection, because there's a big inside scrap going on between commerce, the state and treasury departments as to who the economic warfare chief should be. All the other men proposed are good men, but the administration considers Wallace an ace economist, as full of ideas as an ear of his best corn is full of kernels. It might not happen, but the consideration at least shows how the quiet, "colorless" vice-president is acquitting himself in his new post.

W. L., Easton, Pa.—The United States turns out 45 per cent of the world's steel. Only about 25 per cent of the country's steel output goes for other than civilian purposes, so any shortage will have to be made by curtailing civilian consumption.

N. F., Alexandria, Va.—So far as I can learn, you are right. Washington's new trucking terminal (out on New York avenue) is the first "truck drivers' country club" in the country. Its air-conditioned dormitories and club and game rooms, its tiled showers, first aid station (with a nurse constantly in attendance), barber shop and nifty restaurant where you can get anything from a hamburger-on-a-bun and a coke to a T-bone steak and pie a la mode, are first in the land for the boys who keep-'em-rolling or motor officials here just don't know what they are talking about.

T. F., Long Beach, Long Island—Washington's Traffic Director William A. Von Duzer (he's the No. 1 target for complaints from every front-seat driver in the capital) says staggering hours here (ordering federal workers on the job in half-hour intervals from 8 to 9:30 in the morning) has cut peak traffic loads 15 per cent. Mr. Van Duzer gets his statistics from transportation companies and those little gadgets that count cars when you run over a rubber hose so I wouldn't argue with him. All I say is—that I can't notice it. But Washington traffic being what it is you can take 15 per cent out of it, and it's still bedlam.

F. A., Topeka, Kas.—You must have heard a wrong version of the William S. Knudsen World war story. The way he tells it on himself is that he was driving his car on a "gasless" Sunday, a practice he had been in the habit of, when someone shouted "slacker" and peppered him with over-ripe fruit and vegetables. He didn't have time to explain then, but he had 14 miles to go to work, he was working seven days a week—and his job was production chief for the Ford plant that was turning out mosquito boats for the government.

C. S. M., Alameda, Calif.—No figures are available on the number of army air officers who have resigned to go to China as "instructors," but the Washington rumor is that the number is considerable. I have heard from what should be authentic sources, considering that they are government observers who have been on the ground, that Chinese combat aviators now are among the world's worst; but that given equipment and just a little training, their country should provide excellent defense in the air.

A Farmer's Diary

Sub-Surface Tillage

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

RECENTLY in three widely separated publications, Cleveland Plain Dealer, Successful Farming and the Nebraska Farmer, I saw articles on the subject of "upside-down farming," which is a radical change in agricultural method. I was interested—you will be too.

For 5,000 years—from the day of the pointed wooden fork that was the first plow, down through the times of the metal point, the self self-sharpening point, the metal sulky plow, the multiple tractor plows—the fundamental principle of preparing the land for seed has been the same. It was to stir the soil or turn the top soil under. No other tool than the plow, no other method of tillage is recorded in history.

It remained for thoughtful questioning minds from the University of Nebraska agricultural school to devise something different. These men wondered why the land of the western plains should give up its littered top surface—the part that kept the land from blowing away and from eroding. They had no thought of allowing the permanent wealth of their state to be blown and sifted down on other states where it was not needed or became a nuisance. They ventured the theory that the methods used by Boaz in his barley fields, by the Pharaohs, the ancient Aztecs, by the first American colonists might be antiquated and out of date. They thought this modern streamlined generation deserved something better.

Their vision was translated into action and a new tool was devised which many students of agronomy believe will introduce a new era in agriculture.

This tool is a set of moving knives that cut and mix the soil to a depth of three to six inches, but leave the top intact. When the subsurface tillage tool is in operation, an observer only sees a ripple beneath the earth, like a hand moving gently beneath a counterpane.

On two plots of ground, side by side, the old method and the new were tried out. The same crop, the same fertilizer, the same sun and rain were upon both. The new kind of tillage, it was found, left more mositure in the soil, with no appreciable washing. This produced more available fertilizer and a definitely better crop.

Not only can small grains be grown in this fashion, but also corn, by means of special attachments for planters and cultivators.

REDS SAY THEY ADVANCE ON 5 SECTORS IN WAR

Charge Germans Use Wooden Tanks as Ruse; Nazis Claim They Crack Stalin Line.

the Germans threw fresh reserves into the battle and "crossed to our shore at a cost of tremendous sacrifices."

While conflicting versions of the 16-day-old struggle came from Moscow and Berlin, one thing seemed clear:

Adolf Hitler's invasion armies, according to reports edited by the Nazi Fuehrer himself, still were fighting mostly on the fringe of the vast Soviet Hinterlands after battering through Sovietized "buffer" states. A German military commentator admitted frankly the Russians remained at their posts longer than the French did in the 1940 campaign in the west.

On the reported break at Russia's main defense works, the Germans made this announcement:

"Near the fortification system of the Stalin line, German troops have started to attack the bunker line after successfully defeating Soviet rearguard forces.

"Several strongly fortified bunkers were captured, and the Stalin line was pierced at several places The German troops continue their advance.

"The Bolshevist troops who have been dispersed in the sector of the Pripet (Pinsk) marshes are hastily retreating toward the Stalin line. Only small units of these forces managed to reach sites of safe resistance, due to the advancing German troops and the heavy attacks of the Luftwaffe"

DNB (German news agency) said Nazi columns were lunging ahead from the Volhynia region, west of Kiev, the Ukraine capital, and driving the Russians before them.

On the far north front, the Germans said Finnish troops "succeeded in encircling a whole Soviet battalion after half of them had been killed in action"

Reporting the German invaders routed in five sectors, the Soviet high command declared Red army soldiers broke up a tank-led attempt by Nazi motorized troops to knife through the Ostrov region toward Pskov, at the northern anchor of the Stalin line.

In addition, the Soviet command said the Germans had been driven back near Polotsk, where the Nazis attempted to cross the western Dvina river, in the Lepel area, south of Polotsk, where the Germans sought to outflank Russia's Berezina river defenses; in the Novograd Volynski region, where German drives are aimed at the Ukraine, and finally in an unspecified sector of Russian Bessarabia.

Meanwhile, the British press heightened its demand for outright invasion of the continent while Germany's hands are tied in the Russian conflict.

The London News-Chronicle declared bluntly that exceptional risks must be taken, if victory is to be won.

The Daily Herald commented: "The public expects stronger action and is waiting for it with increased impatience as the days slip by."

Britain's aerial offensive during the week-end claimed four German patrol boats sunk, factories and communications hit at Lille and heavy damage to four cities in western Germany British submarines claimed to have sunk an Italian cruiser and three Axis supply ships as well as to have damaged a merchant cruiser in the Mediterranean.

On the Syrian front, British forces were reported to have pushed westward from captured Palmyra to a point within 25 miles of Homs, important rail junction on lines linking Aleppo with Beirut and Tripoli. Another British column was reported within 12 miles of Beirut. Dispatches from Turkey said the French had rejected terms for surrender offered by the British.

Soviet Planes Bomb Helsinki.

HELSINKI—(U P.)—Soviet planes subjected Helsinki to its first air bombardment of the war during the night, bombing buildings and sweeping down to rake streets in the heart of the capital with machine guns.

At least one person was killed and 20 were injured as Soviet planes roared over Helsinki before the air raid sirens had sounded and began to bomb and machine-gun the center of the city

Hits were scored on at least three buildings. Two were damaged badly.

A heavy explosion was the first notice residents of Helsinki had of the raid. Air raid sirens shrilled and a 30-minute alarm followed.

NEW YORK—(INS)—The British radio, in a broadcast heard by CBS, reported today that Russia sent a 'sharp note" to Tokyo, asking whether Japan will observe the recently concluded Russo-Japanese neutrality agreement.

British Eye Jap Military Moves.

HONG KONG—(INS)—Japanese military moves, which British authorities regarded as preparatory to a possible Nipponese attack against Russia "at an opportune moment," were reported in military advices to Hong Kong today.

These dispatches said the Japanese—apparently calling off their South China drive—were returning to Manchukuo the Kwangtung army troops which last month arrived at Formosa and Hainan as supporting forces.

British authorities felt this move was preparatory to possible action against Russia despite Japanese statements that the return of the troops was a "precautionary measure."

Miss Edna Beathler, 36, Perrysville, suffered severe lacerations about the face and head and possible chest injuries early today when her car was struck in the rear by another on State Route 39, two miles northwest of Loudonville.

Miss Beathler was driving to work in Loudonville at the time of the accident. The other auto, driven by James Williams and owned by W B Taylor, both of Bucyrus, ran into the rear of the Beathler car, knocking it into a ditch Miss Beathler was thrown clear of the car against a fence.

After the collision, the Bucyrus auto also ran into a ditch and hit a utility pole. Williams and Kaylor were not injured. Kaylor told state highway patrolmen that they were en route to Ravenna where they hoped to find employment Miss Beathler was treated at General hospital

Because of another accident, three army men were fined for traffic violations Mrs Laura Bunten, 63, Akron, suffered a fractured left leg when a car driven by Joseph Kroupa, 21, Cleveland, collided with another driven by her daughter, Vera, 27, four miles north of Mt. Kroupa received cuts and bruises and was fined $25 and costs by Mayor J P Bennett of Mt. His car was knocked back into the middle of the road by the collision into the path of Miss Bunten's car. nother car driven by Harley McCauslin, 19, 644 Scholl road, smashed into the rear of Kroupa's car after the head-on collision.

"The time has come to act," he said. "Events have clarified the issues. They have brought us into a new unity. China and America must each shoulder its fair share in putting down this 'old disorder' which seeks to subjugate the free people of the world."

The Indianan charged that American institutions and industries for eight years "have been the butt of a war waged against us by totalitarian power."

"When any nation teams up as Japan has done with this Axis threat, it can hardly do so without expecting to shoulder the full consequences of its actions.

"That comment is more than a generality."

FORMER MANSFIELD MAN WEDS SATURDAY

Richard Wolcott, Son of Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Wolcott, Takes Michigan Girl As Bride In Formal Ceremony Solemnized at Alma, Mich.

THE NUPTIAL MASS for Miss Elizabeth Goggin, daughter of Atty. and Mrs. Charles H. Goggin of Alma, Mich., and Richard Wolcott of Mt. Pleasant, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark P. Wolcott of 689 Maple street, Mansfield, was celebrated at St. Mary's Catholic church Saturday morning, July 5, at 9 o'clock. Rev. Fr. J. A. Mulvey celebrated the mass.

Attendants were Mrs. William Goggin of Midland, and Mrs. Edward Goggin of Alma, sisters-in-law of the bride, as bridesmaids. Frank LaGoe of Clare was best man. Ushers were Edward Goggin; Alma; Bernard Gee, Traverse City; Robert Field, Muskegon Heights; Gordon Granger, Alma.

Mrs. Bernard McBride, St. Louis, organist, played the Lohengrin Bridal Chorus, Wagner, and the Mendelssohn Wedding March. William Goggin, brother of the bride, soloist, sang "Ave Maria," Rosewig. For the ceremony white roses were used in the altar vases and at either side were very tall baskets of white delphinium.

When the bride left the altar she carried a white prayer book to which was attached an orchid, and a shower of swansonia.

Alternating bands of white net and pique formed the floor length wedding gown. At the hem was a wide band of pique and the low cut, square neck of the bodice was finished with a bank of the pique and a tailored bow at one side. The veil of bridal illusion was fastened to a Madonna like halo of shirred net. The bride carried Shasta daisies and baby breath tied with maline, and she wore a single strand of pearls.

Identical gowns, except for color, were worn by the bridesmaids. Mrs. William Goggin wore chartreuse organdie and pique. A touch of brown was carried out in the velvet ribbon drawn through the neck of the dress. She wore a picture hat with brown velvet bow and streamers and carried brown-eyed Susans. Mrs. Edward Goggin wore yellow in the same model. Each wore a gold cross on a brown velvet ribbon.

Mrs. Goggin, mother of the bride, wore an afternoon frock of soldier blue lace and a wide brimmed blue straw hat. Her shoulder bouquet was of Better Times roses, delphinium and baby breath. Mrs. Wolcott, mother of the bridegroom, wore an afternoon model of dusty pink crepe, a white hat and white accessories, and her flowers were yellow roses, blue delphinium, and baby breath.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the Wright House for fifty guests. White and yellow daisies, larkspur, and white delphinium were used about the room and on the tables which also featured a tiered wedding cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Wolcott left Saturday for a week's honeymoon in northern Michigan. Upon their return they will live at 701 Bellows Avenue, Mt. Pleasant.

Mr. Wolcott is a graduate of Mansfield, Ohio high school and of Ohio State university and is now associated with the Roosevelt Oil company as geologist. He is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, and Sigma Gamma Epsilon, honorary mining engineering fraternity. Mrs. Wolcott is a graduate of Alma high school, and attended Alma college where she was a member of the Alpha Theta sorority. She was graduated from Marygrove college at Detroit. For the past two years she has been teaching in the public schools at Mt. Pleasant.

Included in the out-of-town guests attending the wedding, were Mr. and Mrs. Mark P. Wolcott, and Miss Elizabeth Hainer, also of Mansfield.

Buttons In Vogue For New Frocks

By ORRY-KELLY

Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing for International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD—Patience is one virtue men must cultivate this year because it's going to take women twice as long to dress as it formerly did.

Where we designers were once content with from two to five buttons on a costume we now acclaim the smarter detail of 20 to 30 smaller ones fastening the long torsoed bodices of afternoon and evening gowns. Coiffures must necessarily be changed to meet the requirements of each new hat this season, and vise versa. All the vast array of costume jewelry requiring a little study for the best effects will lengthen minutes into hours. Make-up too has become more studied.

There is, however, another side to the picture which should be balm to tortured male souls. This summer the outdoor girl may more easily whisk in and out of her play clothes than she could before, and we've discovered that gentlemen dislike being kept waiting for a swimming date more than they do a dancing date for some peculiar reason.

Probably the longest wait he'll experience is when his lady fair is donning her hat. It demands some trick turns of the feminine wrist, some intimate search for the best hat angles to flatter all of these new and stylized hair arrangements.

The popularity of monotones also lengthens the time it takes a girl to dress because solid colors want jewelry and jeweled accents are involved this year.

MISS HELEN HARTMANN left Sunday for Ann Arbor, Mich., where she will visit and attend the first international conference of the New Education Fellowship to be held in the western hemisphere. Delegates to the conference are coming from the South American republics, Europe and the Orient. The conference theme is, "Education In a World of Nations." This conference is from July 6 to 12.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, July 8.

The planetary configurations for this day must, in a general way, be interpreted as difficult, hazardous and of ill omen. There may be much to contend with in all business relations, which may be subject to peculiar or strange irregularities, with pitfalls, treachery and fraud, especially where writings, documents or verbal agreements are involved. There may be much stubborn opposition from higher-ups, although relatives and social contacts may be beneficial. Safeguard the health as well as property from danger. When momentous decisions must be made, the inner guidance or intuitions may be safe.

Those whose birthday it is may have to endure a difficult year in business affairs, but will find compensations in private happiness and solace. There may be menace of opposition from high places, but this could be offset by friends or elders giving aid in critical places. The intuitions or spiritual vision may be relied upon but there are peculiar dangers, treacheries, frauds and physical perils to be coped with by vigilance and sagacity, particularly where papers, writings and unguarded speech are concerned. Make changes carefully and protect the health.

A child born on this day should have difficulty in getting along with its superiors and business associates although its real disposition will be friendly, sympathetic and guided by worthy spiritual promptings.

FROZEN SALADS

Nothing is quite so refreshing and appetizing as frozen vegetable salads, but care must always be taken to serve them fresh on crisp, cool lettuce or chicory beds. The latter is being used almost as much today, and is recommended for its nutritional value as well as its attractive decorative effect.

FOR WHITE SHOES

To clean white canvas shoes rub them lightly with mild soap suds on a soft brush. Rinse thoroughly in cold water and set in shade to dry. Better stuff the shoes with crushed paper to help them keep their shape.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"You'll need fortification," Mary answered, as I sipped the tea she had brought me. "Some of that gang over there are really quite nice, but two or three of them are celebrity mad. They've been palpitating all over the place all the evening at the thought of meeting you face to face.

"They'll probably bore you to maudlin tears," she predicted darkly, "but I hope you won't shed them until you get back to the sanctuary of this balcony suite."

"I shall restrain myself heroically," I told her.

"Okay," Mary said. "Now I'll let you go and 'freshen' up your complexion. I can't pin that frilly collar in until you get into your gown."

Madge's Speed Surprises Mary.

"I'll be ready for that in less than ten minutes," I promised her, and kept my word. When I came back to her, my hair was recoiffed, my complexion "freshened" and my shoes and gown donned and fastened.

"The eighth world wonder in person!" Mary apostrophized. "You've just been through a wringer of hairbreadth escape, Allah alone knows when you had any sleep, and yet you look as up and coming as if you were a sub-deb at a school party. However do you do it?"

"Shall we get on with this festive affair?" I asked, moving toward the door.

"You mean this tiresome chore, don't you?" Mary inquired slyly.

Wants to Study Redfield.

With a little start I realized that she had accurately described my real reaction to the party in honor of Steve Redfield's birthday. But it was a necessary chore, both because of Philip Veritzen's desire that I appear at it and be properly lionized, and more urgently because of my own wish to watch Stephen Redfield closely, though keeping him unaware of the scrutiny, to find out if possible whether he was sincerely enamored of Mary, or pretending to be for some selfish purpose of his own.

"I don't mean anything of the kind," I told her spiritedly. "You'd be surprised if you knew how keenly I'm looking forward to the next half hour."

Mary Is Skeptical.

That last sentence, at least, was the truth, I placatingly assured my conscience. But Mary, I realized, did not accept it without reserve, although she did not again protest it. But she shot a keen, shrewd look at me, as she dashed ahead of me and opened the door.

We found Olga and Philip, with Olina, "carrying on" the party. But it was not an enthusiastic procedure — Mary's touch was most patently needed—and Noel plainly had given up the effort to play up. He was lounging in a window seat with an air of boredom, which I was sure masked savage jealousy of Stephen Redfield.

Mary's entrance was like the exchange of fresh spark plugs for worn ones in a motor. Faces brightened with interest, friendly for the most part, but in two or three cases envious or critical.

But now there was no boredom, except Noel's simulated ennui. This did not change, even with his wife's entrance, although his eyes, alive and searching, belied his pose, as they focused upon Mary's face when Stephen Redfield came swiftly across the floor toward us.

But I was watching Noel no longer. All my own attention was riveted upon the face of the actor, in a fascination that had no kinship with romance or admiration. For it seemed to me that I had seen him a few hours ago in very different guise.

If South bids 5-Spades to overcall East's stretch to 5-Hearts, West doubles and leads the club A, how should south play to make his contract?

Eight Hours Sleep Needed For Beauty

By MME. QUI VIVE

From the time a little girl is able to regard herself in the looking glass until old age bends the figure, the natural impulse is to strive to look one's best. But beautifying efforts reach the highest peak in the late teens and the early twenties. That is the romantic period, and loveliness plays an important part in the interesting drama of life.

Just how does the sweet young thing go about catching beauty butterflies? Well, my children, she has her own methods. She stalks nifty clothes, plays for hours with her curly hair, buys lipsticks on end, assumes what she considers interesting poses, uses her eyes to the best possible advantage.

On health subjects her mind seldom touches. She eats what she likes regardless of the needs of her body unless her mother keeps after her to consume her vitamins and mineral salts. She drinks water when she is thirsty and the soda fountain isn't within convenient distance. If she is a champion party-goer she never catches up on sleep. Whether or not Edison and Napoleon got along on cat naps has nothing to do with her. They probably weren't half as busy as she is, even though one was bent on important inventions and the other was warring all over Europe. Girls are on the wing these days.

Hoping to catch the eye of the sweet young thing we wish to say that if she is to keep young and pretty she must have eight hours sleep every night, so that body repairs can be made and the motors of energy can be recharged. She mustn't crawl into the sheets dead tired. Fatigue creates poisons and the result is restless slumber. There is such a thing as being so tired that one can't relax. It takes time for the effects of an exciting evening to die down, as every one who is given to wild parties must realize now and then.

When waiting for the sand man to arrive unknot tense muscles, endeavor to release the mind from definite thought: let the thoughts wander Do not sleep with the arms above the head as that habit interferes with the balance of the circulatory system.

A high pillow gives an unnatural curve to the spinal column, forces the shoulders forward; breathing isn't as free as it should be.

Bed clothing too light or too heavy will cause wakefulness. Quiet is essential to perfect repose so if some member of the family has turned on the radio register a protest. In many families there are night prowlers who keep others awake and something should be done about it.

Though one may fancy that noises are not disturbing, the effect upon vitality and the nervous system is there just the same, and it bodes no good let me tell you.

LEMON SYRUP

Lemon sugar syrup stored in the refrigerator helps you whisk up summer beverages in a jiffy. Make the syrup like this: Boil for 5 minutes 2 cups sugar and 4 cups water, add 2 cups lemon juice. Cool and store in refrigerator. Dilute with iced water or fruit juices when thirst-quenchers are in demand.

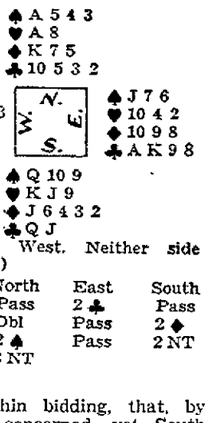
"The Authority on Authorities"

THE BACKWARD FINESSE

There are a few combinations of the cards which do not furnish a chance to make any of the ordinary finesses, but can produce a promoted trick anyway by playing them in a special way. By leading an intermediate honor, prepared to let it go through and win if it is not covered, you go up with a higher honor in the opposite hand if it is covered. Then on the way back you finesse between the remaining top and the card two steps lower against the missing honor.



(Dealer: West. Neither side vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
Pass	Dbl	Pass	2 ♦
Pass	2 ♠	Pass	2 NT
Pass	3 NT

Pretty thin bidding, that, by everybody concerned, yet South could have made his overbid game, and it was too bad to see him miss it. West led his club 7 to the K, on which South put the Q, and he then returned the 8 to the J. Next South led his diamond 2 to the Q and K and returned the diamond 5, playing low and letting the A win. West offered his last club, East taking two tricks with his 9 and A, on which South discarded a spade and a heart, beating himself. East's return was a diamond to the J. South then led the spade Q to the K and A, leaving the J high, so came to his hand with the heart K, took two diamonds and the heart A, then gave up the last trick, being down one.

When the last two clubs were scored, South should have tossed two spades to keep his hearts. Even if East then returned a spade to the A, the diamond J would have been an entry to his own hand. Then he could have made a backward finesse, leading the heart J. If West covered, he could have returned the 8 to the 9, finessing against the 10. That would have given him three tricks in hearts, four in diamonds, and one each in the black suits. The heart Q was marked with West, who otherwise could not have had even a thin opening, and a guess for the 10 in East's hand offered the only likely chance for a game.

Open Season For Puppy Love Reported

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

This used to be the time of the year when certain young people discovered that vacation did not mean perfect bliss because they would no longer see "Dear Teacher" every day.

This year's graduating crop seems to be more interested in each other, and their hard thinking is devoted mainly to how little they can get by on if they take the matrimonial plunge.

The adoration of "Dear Teacher" is no laughing matter to the lovelorn pupil while it lasts. We all had it in our school; we broke out with romance just as we did with mumps or measles. The object of our unrequited love was a sad-looking gentleman in his late thirties who taught Latin.

We didn't know whether "Dear Teacher" was married or not. Some of us cooked up a beautiful romance of a domineering wife; others felt it must have been a sweetheart who died in early youth. Impartially we poured out our pity upon him. As you will remember we have been warned on excellent authority that "pity is akin to love."

But the gentleman was not interested in us or our pity. He taught us Latin and told us practically there was no use in trying to teach silly girls so magnificent a language, but that did not deter us. We sat up nights and labored over Caesar's Commentaries.

Now this class crush—none of us was older than 15 had the effect of making us work hard for good marks. Otherwise, I believe our interest in Caesar and his battles would have been nil. The pinch of Latin we acquired through this massed romance didn't hurt any of us, and of course we all fell in love with something more contemporaneous the minute we had a chance.

In time "Gloomy Gus," as we later called him, seemed a bit pathetic, not to say humorous to us all. Boys and girls of 15 and 16 are given to looking about for a prop on which to hang their dawning affections and "Dear Teacher" is so conveniently at hand.

In a certain woman's college so many girls have been married to professors, assistant professors and instructors that the college has been jocularly referred to as a "Bride's School."

Contrariwise, not often do boy pupils marry "Dear Teacher," and in the cases that have come under my observation the results have known disastrous. I have known of cases in which boys have had semi-romantic notions about "Dear Teacher" and haven't really known what it was all about. Half in love with these ladies, sometimes as old as their mothers, this influence has been all to the good.

One brilliant district attorney was influenced to take up law by "Dear Teacher." He had had many consultations with his wise woman who knew that his interest in her was unconsciously calf love. He asked if he should take up medicine, and she said, "No, you've never got over shivering in your biology class. You'd be a wretched doctor, but you would be a good lawyer." His family were all for putting him in Annapolis, but the boy went in for law and became a successful district attorney.

All said and done, I suppose it's just as well or even better for youngsters to cut their romantic teeth in this fashion. It's a pretty chilly business when they fall for a long distance romance with some movie star or actress. They write him or her letters, even drop into poetry. The postman seldom brings a reply, and when he does, it's written by a secretary. I suppose we've all got to begin learning how to fall in love, and it might as well be "Dear Teacher" as anyone else.

The Ohio State league tonight steals a march on its major league brethren, staging its all-star fracas at Fremont a day ahead of the big wheel's stellar attraction.

But if there's no more interest among Ohio State league fans in watching the loop all-stars perform than there was in picking the team, the march may well turn into a ghost walk.

According to all the information I've been able to gather, Fremont was the only city in which any number of ballots were filed by league fans.

* * *

This department had exactly two replies after 10 days of printing all-star ballots. Lima got four. Fostoria, Findlay and Tiffin did just about as well as Mansfield and Lima.

I'm told that at Fremont, where the fans knew they'd have a chance of seeing the game, there were 47 ballots turned in.

* * *

From now on I pull the bars On ballots for league all-stars.

* * *

League fans are puzzled now over the fact that five Lima players made the all-star team after the Pandas spent the entire first-half season at or near the bottom of the league.

These are the same fans who couldn't find time to put in their vote, so I guess they'll have to stay puzzled.

L. A. Dennis, president of Shelby Mutual Plate Glass and Casualty company, canned an ace on the short No. 3 hole at Shelby Country club last week.

Liberties Lose Close Contest

Marion Rallies After Injury To Hazlett.

Marion A. F. of L. club staged a three-run rally in the eighth inning yesterday to edge the Liberty Parks 5 to 3 on the park diamond.

The Liberties had a 3 to 2 lead when the visitors started their winning attack, which came after Ralph Hazlett's hurling hand was injured.

* * *

Freheit went to the hill for the Liberties without enough warm-up, and was immediately knicked for a couple extra-base blows.

* * *

The Liberties meet Lucas at Liberty Park next Sunday at 3 p. m.

Elmer's Riddle To Cards

Cincinnati Red Hurler Is National's Hottest.

By BILL BONI
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

A POPULAR or unpopular question a few years back, depending on how many times an hour you heard it, was "Where's Elmer?" A most unpopular question in seven National league cities today is "Who's Elmer?"—and the Cincinnati Reds are the only club which has the answer.

Besides the answer, the Cincinnati Reds also have Elmer—Elmer Riddle, the name is. The department of vital statistics says Elmer was born in Columbus, Ga., that he will be 24 years old July 31, bats and throws right-handed, weighs 170 pounds, stands 5 feet 11½ inches, began his baseball career with Wausau (Wis.) of the Northern league in 1936, and is pitching his second season for the Reds.

* * *

What the department of vital statistics does not say is that Elmer right now is the hottest pitcher in what always has been known as a pitchers' league.

* * *

He has won nine games and hasn't lost any, having achieved No. 9 yesterday with a three-hit 3-0 shutout of the St. Louis Cardinals which dropped the Redbirds three games back of the leading Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Dodgers, taking advantage of this assistance by Riddle and the Reds, got some fine five-hit pitching from their own Kirby Higbe, to top the Boston Braves, 5-2. In the nightcap the Braves had come from behind to tie the score at 4-all in the seventh when a rain called a halt to the day's proceedings.

Rain also cut short a projected Giant-Phillies double-header after the New Yorkers had won the eight-inning opener, 7-3, behind Carl Hubbell's six-hit hurling for his fifth straight triumph.

* * *

But in Pittsburgh the weatherman didn't interfere, and the Pirates whipped the Chicago Cubs, 2-1 and 13-4, to oust the victims from fifth place.

* * *

In the American league the New York Yankees had the stage, front and center. They drew the year's top crowd of 60,948, which first witnessed a simple and impressive dedication of his teammates' memorial to Lou Gehrig and then saw those mates proceed to take apart the Philadelphia Athletics, 8-4 and 3-1.

Joe DiMaggio and Red Rolfe got four hits apiece in the first contest, and in the second DiMag stretched his hitting streak to 48 straight with a triple and single which drove in two runs.

* * *

Since 40-year-old Ted Lyons was giving the Chicago White Sox a 9-4 triumph over Cleveland, the Yanks' bulge on the Indians grew to 3½ games.

* * *

The Boston Red Sox backed up two rookies for 6-2 and 4-3 victories over the last-place Washington Senators. A three-run homer by Jimmy Foxx put the first tilt on ice in the first frame for Heber (Dick) Newsome, who gave only five hits, while Cecil (Tex) Hughson, just back from Louisville settled down to win the afterpiece after a shaky getaway.

The Detroit Tigers and St. Louis Browns split their double bill. A six-run blast in the fifth and Al Benton's relief pitching gave Detroit the first encounter 7-5, but the Browns got to Dizzy Trout for four runs in six innings and enough to win the second, 5-3.

Knapp Edged In Hill Duel

Drops 1 to 0 Decision In 9-Inning Battle.

Provident Loan girls softball club staged a comeback yesterday with a 10 to 3 victory over the Lassies at Crooksville, O., after dropping a double-header at Louisville Saturday to the Cameras, formerly the Milk Maids.

* * *

The Providents took it on the chin 7 to 1 and 1 to 0 at Louisville.

* * *

The Mansfield girls got some measure of consolation out of their Louisville trip, forcing the Cameras to go nine innings before they could push over the one run needed to score the shutout victory.

Fran Knapp allowed Louisville only two hits in the 9-frame stretch, while the Providents got only one blow off Knuckles.

Ab Wright's 14th Homer Settles Nightcap Win.

(By Associated Press)

The Minneapolis Millers are off to a good start in their determined bid to return home still the pacesetter in the American association.

Louisville, trailing the Millers by two games, lost a great chance to move up, dropping the first tilt to the Brewers, 5 to 4. Dick Fleming and Emerson Dickman pitched four-hit ball to give the Colonels the second engagement, 4 to 1.

Ray Starr set the Kansas City Blues down with two hits for a 2 to 0 shutout for Indianapolis in the opener. Don Hendrickson evened the program in the second contest, with a 4 to 1 decision over the Blues.

Toledo alone made any headway, sweeping a double bill with St. Paul, 6 to 3 and 7 to 5.

Stars Arrive For Big Game

American League Gets Tired of Trimmings.

By GAYLE TALBOT

DETROIT—(AP)—Having taken a severe kicking around for more than a year now, the American Leaguers are thoroughly tired of it and will be in a determined frame of mind when they tangle with their National League rivals in the ninth annual all-star game at Briggs Stadium tomorrow.

* * *

It is partly for this reason, no doubt, that the Americans have been established favorites in the betting. They have become the hungry "have-nots," injured of pride, whereas the National Leaguers are glutted with victories lately almost to the point of complacency.

* * *

The senior leaguers began giving President Will Harridge's boys their lumps in the all-star game at Tampa spring before last for Finnish relief. And they never stopped. They blanked the Americans, 4 to 0, in the "dream" tussle at St. Louis a year ago and then detailed the Cincinnati Reds to trim the Detroit Tigers in the World Series.

Those chosen stars of both sides began arriving last night, singly and in groups, and practically all of them were expected to be on hand by noon today. Manager Bill McKechnie of the Nationals and Manager Del Baker of the Americans each planned a "strategy" session with the great collection of athletes temporarily under his wing.

As usual, the American League can field a club tomorrow that has it all over any possible National League combination in hitting—at least on paper.

* * *

* * *

The Americans also have some fair country pitchers, including the best in the game today, Bobby Feller. It is probable that Manager Del Baker will throw Feller, Thornton Lee of the White Sox and Red Ruffing of the Yankees at the National League batters tomorrow. Lee is a southpaw. If all three are "right," then the Nationals are in for a tough afternoon.

Ohio State Loop Has Star Game

FREMONT — (AP) — Fremont's pace-setting Green Sox, winners of the first half of the Ohio State league pennant chase, tonight take on all-star team selected by the fans from the other five clubs in the league.

The All-Star squad is piloted by Grover Hartley, manager of the Findlay team.

Its players include:

Pitchers Jack Griffore of Findlay, Eddie Evans of Lima, Chuck Byers of Mansfield, Phil Roy of Fostoria and Elmer Vasno of Tiffin; Catchers Bill Campau of Tiffin and George Ruley of Findlay; Infielders Francis Shank of Findlay, Harry Stephenson of Findlay, Bob Ankrum of Mansfield and Cecil Hubbard of Lima; Outfielders Gene Kavanaugh of Lima, Ray Boone of Tiffin, Les Pruett of Fostoria and Ed Mutryn of Mansfield, and Utility John Cindric of Lima.

In last year's all-star game at Lima a team made up of Fostoria, Findlay and Fremont players defeated a Lima-Mansfield-Tiffin all-star team, 15 to 4.

Hundred Enter Women's Tourney

tries pushed the field to 100 today as the Ohio State women's golf tournament got under way with an 18-hole qualifier.

The only important star missing at tee-off time was Mrs. Burt Weil of Cincinnati, three-time champion.

Most of the sharpshooters toured the 6,150 yard Portage country club layout in practice rounds yesterday, but few kept cards.

Dorothy Gardner, attractive Steubenville shot-maker, posted a 38 on her out nine. Last year she was runnerup to Janet Shock of Dalton. The two are favorites.

Spear Captures Wood Lawn Title

Bob Spear, No. 1 player on the Depauw University tennis team this spring, captured the Woodlawn club singles championship yesterday with a 6-4, 6-3, 6-4 victory over Lowell Bourns in the finals of the club tournament.

Spear and Bob Enos also took the doubles title, defeating Bourns and Waddy Slabaugh 10-8, 7-5, 6-4.

Bourns and Slabaugh won their way into the finals after dropping a love set to Moore and Ellison, and staging a comeback to take the next two sets 7-5 and 6-1.

Fremont Green Sox Win Third Straight

Fisher Slugs Way to Victory In Game With Mansfield Braves.

THE first-half champion Fremont Green Sox have started off the second-half season in the Ohio State league acting like champions.

Yesterday they trimmed Mansfield's Braves 5 to 3 at Fremont on the strength of Lefty Lloyd Fisher's two-run homer and his triple which produced another marker. Fisher, a hurler, was performing in the outfield for the day.

* * *

It was the third straight victory without a defeat for the Hose in the second-half race.

* * *

The Braves once more staged a late rally to get back in the ball game. Trailing 4 to 0 in the seventh they produced three runs.

* * *

Patterson held the Sox to five hits while Mansfield was collecting seven off the slants of Ed Berens, but Fisher's slugging made up the difference in favor of Fremont.

* * *

Tim Mangan checked in with a double to complete the extra-base clouting for this tilt.

The Braves, originally scheduled to meet Fremont here tonight, get a holiday because of the league all-star game at Fremont.

With Umpire Bill Ward still on the shelf with an injured leg, Mansfield and Fremont players helped Bill Rohl with the arbiting, Jim Coleman waving the thumb for the Braves, and Hornyak for the Sox.

Harmon Deferred By Draft Board

GARY, Ind.—(AP)—The draft call of Tom Harmon of Gary, all-America football halfback graduated last month from the University of Michigan, was deferred yesterday till Sept. 1.

* * *

Maynard Montgomery, chairman of Harmon's draft board, said the deferment was granted so the board might study Harmon's petition for reclassification under the selective service act.

* * *

The football star, who has said he has ambitions to get into the movies and radio, has asked that his classification be changed from 1A—ready for service—to 3A—deferred because of dependents.

* * *

He says he is the sole support of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Harmon of Gary. In an affidavit accompanying the petition, Louis Harmon, 68, set out he had been sick a year and quit work last fall.

* * *

Tom's older brother, William Eugene Harmon of Detroit, was inducted into the army a week ago.

PLACES SECOND

DETROIT—(AP)—Milford Harrison of Vermilion, O., was second in the annual international boundary outboard motorboat marathon from Marysville to Detroit. He drove a class C hydroplane. Charles Thompson of Detroit was first in a field of more than 45 starters.

CHAMPIONS PASSED UP IN DOPE SHEET

DENVER—(AP)—Framed in the unusual circumstances of the defending champion and the U. S. Open titleholder relegated to second choice, the 1941 National Professional Golfers association tournament started today at picturesque Cherry Hills.

CHAPTER I

The day began like any other, with the ringing of the alarm clock on the scarred table between the two tarnished metal beds. Doris Newton groaned and stifled it without opening her eyes. Bonnie's voice roused her, speaking with unusual vivacity, considering that she had still been out when Doris went to sleep the night before.

"Wake up, Dee! I've something to tell you."

She sounded composed but excited, too. As if she had been lying awake for hours, Doris thought, sitting up rubbing her drowsy eyes.

"What is it? What's happened?" she asked.

"Don proposed," Bonnie announced without elation. "We're going to be married exactly one month from today."

Doris said, shocked, "But you don't love Don."

"So what?" Bonnie retorted. Doris saw then that Bonnies eyes were circled with sleeplessness. "If you think I'm going on like this, you're crazy. What have we got to hope for? Girls like us are beaten before we start. Waking up in this shabby, dingy room, gulping coffee that tastes like dishwater, running for the street car, standing behind a counter in Klane's basement, smirking 'What size, madam? These are our sixty-nine cent specials, madam. Charge or cash, please?'"

Her voice rose hysterically. "Hanging on to a strap all the way home. Being pushed and shoved around. I can't stand any more of it! I'd marry anyone to get out of it!"

Doris said sympathetically, "I know, Bonnie. There have been times when I've felt that way myself but I know I couldn't go through with it. Maybe you won't either."

"Oh yes, I will," Bonnie said in the new hard voice. "I'll marry him and we'll have a nice little apartment of our own and have you out for Sunday dinner. Don may not be the answer to a maiden's prayer but he's a skilled mechanic and will always make good money. I'd be a fool not to marry him."

"She's trying to convince herself," Doris thought. "Talking herself into it." But she said quietly, "I'll admit life isn't easy for girls on their own without any family . . . in a city like Detroit, or any other city for that matter. If my mother had lived, it would have been different."

"I've got a father," Bonnie said bitterly, "but what has he ever done for me? He doesn't even send me a Christmas card. And speaking of fathers, how about yours? He deserted your mother years ago."

"Well, we'd better not lie here feeling sorry for ourselves," Doris reminded her. "Maybe something will happen to change things."

Fumbling for her slippers, Bonnie cried, "There you go again, always kidding yourself! Maybe you have a rich aunt who'll die and leave you a million dollars!"

"I haven't a rich aunt, Doris admitted, beginning to brush her soft, fair hair. "But my father might come back someday, or maybe I'll win some money in a radio contest. I got a pair of stockings once, and I sent in a swell slogan the other day. Even Roy thought it was good although he says he's sorry he gave me that radio for Christmas. He thinks I'd rather stay home and listen to it than go out with him."

"Well, wouldn't you?" Bonnie demanded, slipping into the black dress the girls at Klane's were required to wear even in the summer.

"Sometimes," Doris confessed, "I do love the musical programs, the symphony concerts and the opera especially. And I do like to have at least some evenings to read. A girl who had to stop high school as I did has to educate herself."

Bonnie smiled at the serious, pretty face reflected in the mirror. "Any girl with a face like yours doesn't need an education. Men don't like smart women. But even if they did I can't imagine where you think you'll ever meet anyone who would know the difference."

"Well, something might happen," Doris insisted stubbornly. "You never can tell."

Hope, Doris reflected, as the two girls left the shabby respectability of Mrs. Ames' boarding house, was all that made the present endurable. Without it she would no doubt have been as resentful as Bonnie during those dragging August days when even the air conditioning in the huge store began to irritate their already jaded nerves. After several hours of it the girls complained of feeling stifled. A tight band seemed to contract about their heads. It was a relief at noon to escape into the humid sweltering street.

Doris wondered for the first time that morning if Bonnie was right in saying they had nothing else to look forward to. Even Roy said Doris was wasting her time always trying to improve herself, but that was because Roy resented anything which detracted her interest from himself. Roy was possessive—one of the many qualities she did not like about him—yet Doris had been grateful for his companionship. Girls working in Klane's basement and living on what they made had not much choice when it came to boy friends.

Foolishly perhaps, she had always thought of it as a temporary arrangement but Bonnie was right . . . Suppose all Doris was ever to have was her room at Mrs. Ames', stuffy and uncomfortable in summer, never quite warm enough in winter, days behind the counter smiling mechanically as she said, "Yes, madam! They are on special today, our regular dollar hose for seventy-nine cents. It's an exceptional value. What size please?"

"What's the matter with me?" Doris thought as she made out the sales check. "Nothing is any worse than it was yesterday. Or the day before that. Can it be because I know Bonnie is getting away from it?"

She would miss Bonnie. Without her caustic wit and salty comments Doris would be lonelier than ever. This may have been why she was as glad as she was surprised to see Roy Johnston standing before her counter at 12 o'clock.

"Surprise," he laughed. "We're going to have lunch together."

"How come?" Doris asked as they left the store.

The blue eyes beneath the white straw hat lighted sympathetically. "Honestly, Roy? I'm so glad."

Roy's rather heavy face was flushed with pride.

"Sky's the limit today."

Doris smiled. Usually they went to the cheapest places, ordering carefully. Yet even with his raise she knew Roy could not afford to be extravagant.

"Fruit salad and ice tea for me," she said.

When the waiter had gone, Roy leaned across the table.

"I was going to wait until tonight to tell you but I couldn't," he confessed. "I guess you know how I feel about you, honey. We can afford to get married now—with the raise I mean."

Doris could not meet his eager brown eyes.

"Well," he continued, "how about it? You can stop working. We can have a little apartment."

* * *

How strange that his proposal should come the very next day after Bonnie had accepted Don! At an hour when her own morale should be so weak. But recalling her advice to Bonnie, Doris straightened her tired, young shoulders. Bonnie's creed was not hers. She would not—must not surrender.

"I can't," she said quickly.

"Why not?" he urged. "There isn't anyone else?"

Doris shook her head.

"I'm not in love with you," she protested.

Roy brightened. "You're too romantic, honey! If you'd stop kidding yourself that something wonderful is just around the corner, you could be happy with me."

Could she, she wondered wistfully. Was it "kidding" herself to imagine that someday she was going to have a beautiful, thrilling romance which would lift her out of the humdrum present? For a moment she tried to picture a little apartment of her own—but it would not be her own if she had to share it with Roy.

Much as she liked Roy she knew it would be impossible for her to marry him. It would be like closing the door to freedom. Freedom for what?

"I don't know," she admitted, "adventure, perhaps . . ."

Deep in her heart were those dreams she could not relinquish, that sometime, someday she was to live a life entirely different from anything she had ever known. This dream had become more important to her than reality.

"It wouldn't be fair," she said, "to either of us. I'll never marry a man unless I am in love."

With the memory of Bonnie's plans still ringing in her ears, she was unnecessarily emphatic. And Roy resented it.

"Okay," he said, hurt. "I'm sorry I mentioned it. But remember this, Doris. You may change your mind and if you do I hope it won't be too late."

"What do you mean—too late?" she inquired.

"Just what I say," he retorted. "It's quite possible, you know, that I will marry someone else. I'm not the type to wait around forever."

* * *

No, he was not the type to take his love that seriously, Doris reflected as they walked in silence back to the store. If he were, she might have cared more for him . . . But now Roy was saying goodbye, but saying nothing about seeing her again. He had been her only boy friend. Bonnie would be marrying Don and Doris would be lonelier than ever without either of them.

The afternoon dragged endlessly. Never had Doris been so depressed as she was returning to the boarding house at six o'clock. She paused a moment in the dingy hall to remove her hat and push the wisps of damp hair from her damp forehead. The hall was dark so that she did not notice the envelope addressed with her name until Mrs. Ames called her from the dining room.

"There's a letter for you, Miss Newton."

Doris picked it up listlessly. Nothing but an ad. Then she saw that it bore the return address of the company which had been conducting a radio contest.

With trembling hands she tore it open to read:

"We are delighted to inform you that you have won first prize in our recent radio contest. . . . Enclosed please find our check. . . ."

Doris stared at that check with unbelieving eyes. It couldn't be true! Although she had sent in dozens of slogans to various contests, always with the secret hope that she might win something, it had not occurred to her that she would really be first! Yet there it was, stamped in black figures, which seemed twice as large as they really were. $5,000! Five thousand dollars! Made out to Doris Newton, who earned $18 a week standing behind a counter in Klane's basement, in the city of Detroit.

She wanted to laugh. Instead she began to cry. Unable to keep her good fortune to herself, she ran into the dining room waving the check before the eyes of her astonished landlady.

"Mrs. Ames! I've won first prize! Look! It's—the check for five thousand dollars!"

"Five thousand dollars!" Mrs. Ames repeated. "For what?"

"For my slogan for that new canned milk! Isn't it wonderful? Oh, but I can't believe it! There must be some mistake."

Mrs. Ames, so fat that it seemed impossible for her tiny feet and ankles to support her rotund body, examined the check with reverence.

"It's for you, all right. Yes sir, that's a genuine check for the full amount. Imagine having that much money all at one time! You must be careful of it, you know. You'd better put it in a bank."

"Of course!" Doris agreed, placing it inside her pocketbook. "I'll start an account tomorrow morning."

* * *

But long before morning came her plans were made to spend that money. To walk out of Klane's store and not return to it again until every penny of the five thousand was gone. Roy and Bonnie had thought she was crazy because she was always dreaming of a romantic future. What would they say now when she told them it had become a possibility—and not for herself alone With five thousand behind her, she could rescue Bonnie from the loveless marriage she was contemplating!

Bonnie, however, had different ideas. Confronted by her excited roommate when she returned that night, Bonnie admitted that she was impressed but she urged Doris to invest her money.

"I'm going to invest it," Doris explained with sparkling eyes. "I'm going to South America and you're going with me!"

Bonnie's eyes filled with tears. Bonnie was not pretty. Her features were too irregular, her expresion too bitter, but at this moment she was so touched she came close to real beauty.

"If she had the right clothes and a little fun, she'd look like a different person," Doris thought.

But Bonnie refused. When she heard the plans Doris had been concocting, she said, "Listen, kid, you're crazy! If you do half those things, your money won't last a year It's swell of you to include me—but I'm going to marry Don. Sailing to South America has no appeal for me with a war going on in Europe. I'm not anxious to get blown up by a submarine."

"They wouldn't torpedo or shoot up an American ship," Doris stated confidently.

"That's what you think. Even if they didn't, the very thought of being on a ship makes me seasick. I'm the kind that has to have solid ground under my feet. And besides, after we'd taken the trip —what?"

"Haven't you any imagination?" Doris laughed. "Anything could happen to us on the kind of ship I'm planning to take. Think what it would mean to go first-class on a luxury liner! with all the clothes we want, and plenty of money to stay at the best hotels!"

"It would make it all the harder to go back to work," Bonnie said practically. "Even five thousand dollars can't last forever. No, Doris. It's security I'm after. If I turn Don down to go with you, I'll probably lose him. And I can't afford to take a chance. Maybe I'm not a good gambler. But I've never gotten anything for nothing in my life. I could go around the world and back without getting a break."

Doris was disappointed but Bonnie's refusal made no difference in her own decision. It simply was not possible, that a girl could go through such an experience and be the same afterward. It would be worth more than four years at college. To actually see foreign countries and listen to strange languages would be an education in itself. But to be able to do it with the proper wardrobe, without consideration of the cost . . . It would be like stepping into the pages of a novel. One would become a heroine the moment one stepped upon the ship.

* * *

Five thousand dollars would be her Aladdin's lamp—making all things possible! Romance, adventure, freedom! She could have her shining hour and she would live every minute of it. Then when it was over, if it was necessary to go back to work, she would do so uncomplainingly. After all, she was young. She could always find a job. Why should she be afraid? She had it all figured out. At nineteen, the present is infinitely more important than the future.

The very next day Doris Newton quit her job. She felt like a little girl playing truant from school. It was wonderful to be able to walk leisurely down the street, to see the respect in the eyes of the bank teller when she deposited her five thousand dollars.

"I may be crazy," Doris told herself delightedly, "but if I am, I don't care."

The mood held all through the afternoon when she made her reservation on the ship leaving New York in two weeks.

"You're lucky," the travel agent said. "There's been a cancellation." He did not add that there had been many cancellations since war on the seas was looming up more daily as one of the important factors of the World war that had been checked at the English Channel. That war seemed very far away to the girl who now began to spend all her waking hours purchasing a wardrobe which would have done credit to a movie star.

Doris Newton tried on dress after dress — hundreds of dresses. She bought dozens, ignoring the price marks, intent on examining her reflected figure with a critical eye. She selected only those which "did something" for her.

There were superbly tailored sport clothes, an imported black suit, a fur jacket, and wispy evening gowns which the salesgirl assured her would be just the thing for an ocean voyage.

"Clothes certainly make a difference," Doris thought, staring at herself in a draped black silk jersey. She looked poised, luxurious, sophisticated. Like the photographs in the Sunday papers. Girls who had never had to worry where the next meal was coming from; who had never stood behind a stocking counter; who moved in that glamorous world of which Doris Newton was about to have her first glimpse.

Doris assembled her wardrobe like a general marshalling his supplies for an attack. No single detail was neglected. Fifteen pairs of shoes; ten hats; gloves and bags to match each costume. Fragile handmade blouses and the daintiest of lingerie.

And when the bills had all been paid, when she found that a hole of almost two thousand dollars had been made in her account, she did not even regret it. Better to live gloriously for as long as it lasted. At least she would have something to remember.

Roy, who had been dazed and a little resentful of her good fortune, consented to go to the train with her.

"You're heading for trouble," he prophesied gloomily.

* * *

They had drawn apart from Bonnie and Don for a moment and were standing with Doris's smart striped luggage piled around her —hat box and overnight bag and pullman case. Her trunk had been checked.

"You're not even listening to me," Roy complained.

"I'm sorry," Doris said, putting a half-repentant hand on his arm. "You've been sweet to me, Roy, and I appreciate it."

He stared at her reproachfully.

"Sure—and so what?"

"I'll write you from every port," she promised recklessly.

But she knew that in Roy's eyes she was spending money which could have paid for a little house, even helped to furnish it.

"But I don't want a little house . . . with Roy," she reminded herself.

"Watch out for these shipboard romances," he warned as they were joined by Bonnie and Don.

Doris laughed. "I can take care of myself."

Yet his words brought back the vision that haunted her—that had been haunting her for months. In her dreams she had pictured the deck of a ship and a man leaning the rail. He would be tall. He would have sleek black hair.

"It's almost time for the train to start," Bonnie said, putting her arms around her friend and kissing her as if she never expected to see her again.

It was time! Time to start at last on her great adventure! Doris squeezed Roy's arm and brushed the briefest of kisses against his cheek.

"Good-bye, Roy! 'Bye, Don! 'Bye Bonnie! You'll be married when I come back."

"If you come back," Roy said unhappily.

Doris left him standing there looking wistful, angry. Poor Roy. She wished he did not care so much.

But she did not look back. She pushed straight ahead through the crowded train to her section, walking head high, proudly, like a princess.

As long as she lived she would remember that first slow pull of the train, taking her upon the first stage of her journey—the low murmur of conversation and laughter; the green shades shutting out the night; the cool stiff sheets in her berth; the plump, fat pillows beneath her head.

She would never forget the next morning in New York. Grand Central station. The taxi ride to her hotel. She was moving in a dream now, living each moment as it came, storing each memory, which seemed more precious than the last.

The ship sailed at midnight.

Doris stood at the rail and watched the crowd below.

She did not mind that there was no one to tell her good-bye. She felt no sense of fear or sadness in this departure. She was leaving nothing but poverty and futility and the maddening sameness of each monotonous day.

And ahead? What was before her in the vast waters of the Atlantic? As the boat began to slip slowly away from the pier, Doris whispered, "No matter what happens to me, it will be worth it!"

Adopts Song.

Lively Comedy.

When a salesgirl inherits a million dollars things begin to hapen in "Million Dollar Baby," showing at the Madison with Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn and Ronald Reagan in the leads. The first thing Priscilla does is create havoc in the vegetable cutter department where she is a gadget demonstrator. Then she goes beserk on a buying expedition and almost looses her friends in the general havoc. Barton MacLane and Gladys George attempt to steer the Dead End Kids along the straight path in "Hit the Road," thrilling drama of orphaned boys out to avenge their parents' murder.

O'Neill Dramas.

Four of Eugene O'Neill's one-act plays were combined to form the tense drama now showing at the Park under the title, "The Long Voyage Home." Taking place on an ammunition laden tramp steamer that is making its way through the present war zone the picture thrillingly presents the last stand of a renegade army officer to save the ship, the efforts of a Limehouse habitue to shanghai the crew, and the romance of a Swedish sailor and a bum-boat girl. John Wayne, Thomas Mitchell and Ian Hunter head the cast. Gene Autry in "The Singing Hill," is the co-feature.

Sport Podge by REX HESS

The Ohio State league tonight steals a march on its major league brethren, staging its all-star fracas at Fremont a day ahead of the big wheel's stellar attraction.

But if there's no more interest among Ohio State league fans in watching the loop all-stars perform than there was in picking the team, the march may well turn into a ghost walk.

According to all the information I've been able to gather, Fremont was the only city in which any number of ballots were filed by league fans.

* * *

This department had exactly two replies after 10 days of printing all-star ballots. Lima got four. Fostoria, Findlay and Tiffin did just about as well as Mansfield and Lima.

I'm told that at Fremont, where the fans knew they'd have a chance of seeing the game, there were 47 ballots turned in.

* * *

From now on I pull the bars On ballots for league all-stars.

* * *

League fans are puzzled now over the fact that five Lima players made the all-star team after the Pandas spent the entire first-half season at or near the bottom of the league.

These are the same fans who couldn't find time to put in their vote, so I guess they'll have to stay puzzled.

From Shelby comes word of the first hole-in-one snared on golf courses of this section this season.

L. A. Dennis, president of Shelby Mutual Plate Glass and Casualty company, canned an ace on the short No. 3 hole at Shelby Country club last week.

One swing and in. Just think of the exercise the rest of us get, and he misses.

Liberties Lose Close Contest

Marion Rallies After Injury To Hazlett.

Marion A. F. of L. club staged a three-run rally in the eighth inning yesterday to edge the Liberty Parks 5 to 3 on the park diamond.

The Liberties had a 3 to 2 lead when the visitors started their winning attack, which came after Ralph Hazlett's hurling hand was injured.

* * *

Freheit went to the hill for the Liberties without enough warm-up, and was immediately knocked for a couple extra-base blows.

* * *

The Liberties meet Lucas at Liberty Park next Sunday at 3 p. m.

Elmer's Riddle To Cards

Cincinnati Red Hurler Is National's Hottest.

By BILL BONI
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

A POPULAR or unpopular question a few years back, depending on how many times an hour you heard it, was "Where's Elmer?" A most unpopular question in seven National league cities today is "Who's Elmer?"—and the Cincinnati Reds are the only club which has the answer.

Besides the answer, the Cincinnati Reds also have Elmer—Elmer Riddle, the name is. The department of vital statistics says Elmer was born in Columbus, Ga., that he will be 24 years old July 31, bats and throws right-handed, weighs 170 pounds, stands 5 feet 11½ inches, began his baseball career with Wausau (Wis.) of the Northern league in 1936, and is pitching his second season for the Reds.

* * *

What the department of vital statistics does not say is that Elmer right now is the hottest pitcher in what always has been known as a pitchers' league.

* * *

He has won nine games and hasn't lost any, having achieved No. 9 yesterday with a three-hit 3-0 shutout of the St. Louis Cardinals which dropped the Redbirds three games back of the leading Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Dodgers, taking advantage of this assistance by Riddle and the Reds, got some fine five-hit pitching from their own Kirby Higbe, to top the Boston Braves, 5-2. In the nightcap the Braves had come from behind to tie the score at 4-all in the seventh when a rain called a halt to the day's proceedings.

Rain also cut short a projected Giant-Phillies double-header after the New Yorkers had won the eight-inning opener, 7-3, behind Carl Hubbell's six-hit hurling for his fifth straight triumph.

* * *

But in Pittsburgh the weatherman didn't interfere, and the Pirates whipped the Chicago Cubs, 2-1 and 13-4, to oust the victims from fifth place.

* * *

In the American league the New York Yankees had the stage, front and center. They drew the year's top crowd of 60,948, which first witnessed a simple and impressive dedication of his teammates' memorial to Lou Gehrig and then saw those mates proceed to take apart the Philadelphia Athletics, 8-4 and 3-1.

Joe DiMaggio and Red Rolfe got four hits apiece in the first contest, and in the second DiMag stretched his hitting streak to 48 straight with a triple and single which drove in two runs.

* * *

Since 40-year-old Ted Lyons was giving the Chicago White Sox a 9-4 triumph over Cleveland, the Yanks' bulge on the Indians grew to 3½ games.

* * *

The Boston Red Sox backed up two rookies for 6-2 and 4-3 victories over the last-place Washington Senators. A three-run homer by Jimmy Foxx put the first tilt on ice in the first frame for Heber (Dick) Newsome, who gave only five hits, while Cecil (Tex) Hughson, just back from Louisville settled down to win the afterpiece after a shaky getaway.

The Detroit Tigers and St. Louis Browns split their double bill. A six-run blast in the fifth and Al Benton's relief pitching gave Detroit the first encounter 7-5, but the Browns got to Dizzy Trout for four runs in six innings and enough to win the second, 5-3.

Nova Tells Kids What He'll Do To Joe

Knapp Edged In Hill Duel

Drops 1 to 0 Decision In 9-Inning Battle.

Provident Loan girls softball club staged a comeback yesterday with a 10 to 3 victory over the Lassies at Crooksville, O., after dropping a double-header at Louisville Saturday to the Cameras, formerly the Milk Maids.

* * *

The Providents took it on the chin 7 to 1 and 1 to 0 at Louisville.

* * *

The Mansfield girls got some measure of consolation out of their Louisville trip, forcing the Cameras to go nine innings before they could push over the one run needed to score the shutout victory.

Fran Knapp allowed Louisville only two hits in the 9-frame stretch, while the Providents got only one blow off Knuckles.

Millers Split With Red Birds

Ab Wright's 14th Homer Settles Nightcap Win.

(By Associated Press)

The Minneapolis Millers are off to a good start in their determined bid to return home still the pacesetter in the American association.

* * *

Columbus trampled the Millers, 5 to 2, behind Preacher Roe's steady pitching in the first contest, but Ab Wright's 14th homer in the nightcap tipped the scales against Johnny Grodzicki as the Millers won, 4 to 1.

* * *

Louisville, trailing the Millers by two games, lost a great chance to move up, dropping the first tilt to the Brewers, 5 to 4.. Dick Fleming and Emerson Dickman pitched four-hit ball to give the Colonels the second engagement, 4 to 1.

Ray Starr set the Kansas City Blues down with two hits for a 2 to 0 shutout for Indianapolis in the opener. Don Hendrickson evened the program in the second contest, with a 4 to 1 decision over the Blues.

Toledo alone made any headway, sweeping a double bill with St. Paul, 6 to 3 and 7 to 5.

Hundred Enter Women's Tourney

tries pushed the field to 100 today as the Ohio State women's golf tournament got under way with an 18-hole qualifier.

The only important star missing at tee-off time was Mrs. Burt Weil of Cincinnati, three-time champion.

Most of the sharpshooters toured the 6,150 yard Portage country club layout in practice rounds yesterday, but few kept cards.

Dorothy Gardner, attractive Steubenville shot-maker, posted a 38 on her out nine. Last year she was runnerup to Janet Shock of Dalton. The two are favorites.

Spear Captures Wood Lawn Title

Bob Spear, No. 1 player on the Depauw University tennis team this spring, captured the Woodlawn club singles championship yesterday with a 6-4, 6-3, 6-4 victory over Lowell Bourns in the finals of the club tournament.

Spear and Bob Enos also took the doubles title, defeating Bourns and Waddy Slabaugh 10-8, 7-5, 6-4.

Bourns and Slabaugh won their way into the finals after dropping a love set to Moore and Ellison, and staging a comeback to take the next two sets 7-5 and 6-1.

Stars Arrive For Big Game

American League Gets Tired of Trimmings.

By GAYLE TALBOT

DETROIT—(AP)—Having taken a severe kicking around for more than a year now, the American Leaguers are thoroughly tired of it and will be in a determined frame of mind when they tangle with their National League rivals in the ninth annual all-star game at Briggs Stadium tomorrow.

* * *

It is partly for this reason, no doubt, that the Americans have been established favorites in the betting. They have become the hungry "have-nots," injured of pride, whereas the National Leaguers are glutted with victories lately almost to the point of complacency.

* * *

The senior leaguers began giving President Will Harridge's boys their lumps in the all-star game at Tampa spring before last for Finnish relief. And they never stopped. They blanked the Americans, 4 to 0, in the "dream" tussle at St. Louis a year ago and then detailed the Cincinnati Reds to trim the Detroit Tigers in the World Series.

Those chosen stars of both sides began arriving last night, singly and in groups, and practically all of them were expected to be on hand by noon today. Manager Bill McKechnie of the Nationals and Manager Del Baker of the Americans each planned a "strategy" session with the great collection of athletes temporarily under his wing.

As usual, the American League can field a club tomorrow that has it all over any possible National League combination in hitting—at least on paper.

* * *

* * *

The Americans also have some fair country pitchers, including the best in the game today, Bobby Feller. It is probable that Manager Del Baker will throw Feller, Thornton Lee of the White Sox and Red Ruffing of the Yankees at the National League batters tomorrow. Lee is a southpaw. If all three are "right," then the Nationals are in for a tough afternoon.

Ohio State Loop Has Star Game

FREMONT — (AP) — Fremont's pace-setting Green Sox, winners of the first half of the Ohio State league pennant chase, tonight take on all-star team selected by the fans from the other five clubs in the league.

The All-Star squad is piloted by Grover Hartley, manager of the Findlay team.

Its players include:

Pitchers Jack Griffore of Findlay, Eddie Evans of Lima, Chuck Byers of Mansfield, Phil Roy of Fostoria and Elmer Vasno of Tiffin; Catchers Bill Campau of Tiffin and George Ruley of Findlay; Infielders Francis Shank of Findlay, Harry Stephenson of Findlay, Bob Ankrum of Mansfield and Cecil Hubbard of Lima; Outfielders Gene Kavanaugh of Lima, Ray Boone of Tiffin, Les Pruett of Fostoria and Ed Mutryn of Mansfield, and Utility John Cindric of Lima.

In last year's all-star game at Lima a team made up of Fostoria, Findlay and Fremont players defeated a Lima-Mansfield-Tiffin all-star team, 15 to 4.

Fremont Green Sox Win Third Straight

Fisher Slugs Way to Victory In Game With Mansfield Braves.

THE first-half champion Fremont Green Sox have started off the second-half season in the Ohio State league acting like champions.

Yesterday they trimmed Mansfield's Braves 5 to 3 at Fremont on the strength of Lefty Lloyd Fisher's two-run homer and his triple which produced another marker. Fisher, a hurler, was performing in the outfield for the day.

* * *

It was the third straight victory without a defeat for the Hose in the second-half race.

* * *

The Braves once more staged a late rally to get back in the ball game. Trailing 4 to 0 in the seventh they produced three runs.

* * *

Patterson held the Sox to five hits while Mansfield was collecting seven off the slants of Ed Berens, but Fisher's slugging made up the difference in favor of Fremont.

* * *

Tim Mangan checked in with a double to complete the extra-base clouting for this tilt.

The Braves, originally scheduled to meet Fremont here tonight, get a holiday because of the league all-star game at Fremont.

With Umpire Bill Ward still on the shelf with an injured leg, Mansfield and Fremont players helped Bill Rohl with the arbiting, Jim Coleman waving the thumb for the Braves, and Hornyak for the Sox.

Harmon Deferred By Draft Board

GARY, Ind.—(AP)—The draft call of Tom Harmon of Gary, all-America football halfback graduated last month from the University of Michigan, was deferred yesterday till Sept. 1.

* * *

Maynard Montgomery, chairman of Harmon's draft board, said the deferment was granted so the board might study Harmon's petition for reclassification under the selective service act.

* * *

The football star, who has said he has ambitions to get into the movies and radio, has asked that his classification be changed from 1A—ready for service—to 3A—deferred because of dependents.

* * *

He says he is the sole support of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Harmon of Gary. In an affidavit accompanying the petition, Louis Harmon, 68, set out he had been sick a year and quit work last fall.

Tom's older brother, William Eugene Harmon of Detroit, was inducted into the army a week ago.

CHAPTER I

The day began like any other, with the ringing of the alarm clock on the scarred table between the two tarnished metal beds. Doris Newton groaned and stifled it without opening her eyes. Bonnie's voice roused her, speaking with unusual vivacity, considering that she had still been out when Doris went to sleep the night before.

"Wake up, Dee! I've something to tell you."

She sounded composed but excited, too. As if she had been lying awake for hours, Doris thought, sitting up rubbing her drowsy eyes.

"What is it? What's happened?" she asked.

"Don proposed," Bonnie announced without elation. "We're going to be married exactly one month from today."

Doris said, shocked, "But you don't love Don."

"So what?" Bonnie retorted. Doris saw then that Bonnies eyes were circled with sleeplessness. "If you think I'm going on like this, you're crazy. What have we got to hope for? Girls like us are beaten before we start. Waking up in this shabby, dingy room, gulping coffee that tastes like dishwater, running for the street car, standing behind a counter in Klane's basement, smirking 'What size, madam? These are our sixty-nine cent specials, madam. Charge or cash, please?'"

Her voice rose hysterically. "Hanging on to a strap all the way home. Being pushed and shoved around. I can't stand any more of it! I'd marry anyone to get out of it!"

Doris said sympathetically, "I know, Bonnie. There have been times when I've felt that way myself but I know I couldn't go through with it. Maybe you won't either."

"Oh yes, I will," Bonnie said in the new hard voice. "I'll marry him and we'll have a nice little apartment of our own and have you out for Sunday dinner. Don may not be the answer to a maiden's prayer but he's a skilled mechanic and will always make good money. I'd be a fool not to marry him."

"She's trying to convince herself," Doris thought. "Talking herself into it." But she said quietly, "I'll admit life isn't easy for girls on their own without any family . . . in a city like Detroit, or any other city for that matter. If my mother had lived, it would have been different."

"I've got a father," Bonnie said bitterly, "but what has he ever done for me? He doesn't even send me a Christmas card. And speaking of fathers, how about yours? He deserted your mother years ago."

"Well, we'd better not lie here feeling sorry for ourselves," Doris reminded her. "Maybe something will happen to change things."

Fumbling for her slippers, Bonnie cried, "There you go again, always kidding yourself! Maybe you have a rich aunt who'll die and leave you a million dollars!"

"I haven't a rich aunt, Doris admitted, beginning to brush her soft, fair hair. "But my father might come back someday, or maybe I'll win some money in a radio contest. I got a pair of stockings once, and I sent in a swell slogan the other day. Even Roy thought it was good although he says he's sorry he gave me that radio for Christmas. He thinks I'd rather stay home and listen to it than go out with him."

"Well, wouldn't you?" Bonnie demanded, slipping into the black dress the girls at Klane's were required to wear even in the summer.

"Sometimes," Doris confessed, "I do love the musical programs, the symphony concerts and the opera especially. And I do like to have at least some evenings to read. A girl who had to stop high school as I did has to educate herself."

Bonnie smiled at the serious, pretty face reflected in the mirror. "Any girl with a face like yours doesn't need an education. Men don't like smart women. But even if they did I can't imagine where you think you'll ever meet anyone who would know the difference."

Hope, Doris reflected, as the two girls left the shabby respectability of Mrs. Ames' boarding house, was all that made the present endurable. Without it she would no doubt have been as resentful as Bonnie during those dragging August days when even the air conditioning in the huge store began to irritate their already jaded nerves. After several hours of it the girls complained of feeling stifled. A tight band seemed to contract about their heads. It was a relief at noon to escape into the humid sweltering street.

Doris wondered for the first time that morning if Bonnie was right in saying they had nothing else to look forward to. Even Roy said Doris was wasting her time always trying to improve herself; but that was because Roy resented anything which detracted her interest from himself. Roy was possessive—one of the many qualities she did not like about him—yet Doris had been grateful for his companionship. Girls working in Klane's basement and living on what they made had not much choice when it came to boy friends.

Foolishly perhaps, she had always thought of it as a temporary arrangement but Bonnie was right . . . Suppose all Doris was ever to have was her room at Mrs. Ames', stuffy and uncomfortable in summer, never quite warm enough in winter, days behind the counter smiling mechanically as she said, "Yes, madam! They are on special today, our regular dollar hose for seventy-nine cents. It's an exceptional value. What size please?"

"What's the matter with me?" Doris thought as she made out the sales check. "Nothing is any worse than it was yesterday. Or the day before that. Can it be because I know Bonnie is getting away from it?"

She would miss Bonnie. Without her caustic wit and salty comments Doris would be lonelier than ever. This may have been why she was as glad as she was surprised to see Roy Johnston standing before her counter at 12 o'clock.

"Surprise," he laughed. "We're going to have lunch together."

"How come?" Doris asked as they left the store.

"I got a raise," Roy announced. "We're celebrating."

The blue eyes beneath the white straw hat lighted sympathetically. "Honestly, Roy? I'm so glad."

Roy's rather heavy face was flushed with pride.

"Sky's the limit today."

Doris smiled. Usually they went to the cheapest places, ordering carefully. Yet even with his raise she knew Roy could not afford to be extravagant.

"Fruit salad and ice tea for me," she said.

When the waiter had gone, Roy leaned across the table.

"I was going to wait until tonight to tell you but I couldn't," he confessed. "I guess you know how I feel about you, honey. We can afford to get married now—with the raise I mean."

Doris could not meet his eager brown eyes.

* * *

How strange that his proposal should come the very next day after Bonnie had accepted Don! At an hour when her own morale should be so weak. But recalling her advice to Bonnie, Doris straightened her tired, young shoulders. Bonnie's creed was not hers. She would not—must not surrender.

"I can't," she said quickly.

"Why not?" he urged. "There isn't anyone else?"

Doris shook her head.

"I'm not in love with you," she protested.

Roy brightened. "You're too romantic, honey! If you'd stop kidding yourself that something wonderful is just around the corner, you could be happy with me."

Could she, she wondered wistfully. Was it "kidding" herself to imagine that someday she was going to have a beautiful, thrilling romance which would lift her out of the humdrum present? For a moment she tried to picture a little apartment of her own—but it would not be her own if she had to share it with Roy.

Much as she liked Roy she knew it would be impossible for her to marry him. It would be like closing the door to freedom. Freedom for what?

"I don't know," she admitted, "adventure, perhaps . . ."

Deep in her heart were those dreams she could not relinquish, that sometime, someday she was to live a life entirely different from anything she had ever known. This dream had become more important to her than reality.

"It wouldn't be fair," she said, "to either of us. I'll never marry a man unless I am in love."

With the memory of Bonnie's plans still ringing in her ears, she was unnecessarily emphatic. And Roy resented it.

"Okay," he said, hurt. "I'm sorry I mentioned it. But remember this, Doris. You may change your mind and if you do I hope it won't be too late."

"What do you mean—too late?" she inquired.

"Just what I say," he retorted. "It's quite possible, you know, that I will marry someone else. I'm not the type to wait around forever."

* * *

No, he was not the type to take his love that seriously, Doris reflected as they walked in silence back to the store. If he were, she might have cared more for him . . . But now Roy was saying goodbye, but saying nothing about seeing her again. He had been her only boy friend. Bonnie would be marrying Don and Doris would be lonelier than ever without either of them.

The afternoon dragged endlessly. Never had Doris been so depressed as she was returning to the boarding house at six o'clock. She paused a moment in the dingy hall to remove her hat and push the wisps of damp hair from her damp forehead. The hall was dark so that she did not notice the envelope addressed with her name until Mrs. Ames called her from the dining room.

"There's a letter for you, Miss Newton."

Doris picked it up listlessly. Nothing but an ad. Then she saw that it bore the return address of the company which had been conducting a radio contest.

With trembling hands she tore it open to read:

"We are delighted to inform you that you have won first prize in our recent radio contest. . . . Enclosed please find our check. . . ."

Doris stared at that check with unbelieving eyes. It couldn't be true! Although she had sent in dozens of slogans to various contests, always with the secret hope that she might win something, it had not occurred to her that she would really be first! Yet there it was, stamped in black figures, which seemed twice as large as they really were. $5,000! Five thousand dollars! Made out to Doris Newton, who earned $18 a week standing behind a counter in Klane's basement, in the city of Detroit.

She wanted to laugh. Instead she began to cry. Unable to keep her good fortune to herself, she ran into the dining room waving the check before the eyes of her astonished landlady.

"Mrs. Ames! I've won first prize! Look! It's—the check for five thousand dollars!"

"Five thousand dollars!" Mrs. Ames repeated. "For what?"

"For my slogan for that new canned milk! Isn't it wonderful? Oh, but I can't believe it! There must be some mistake."

Mrs. Ames, so fat that it seemed impossible for her tiny feet and ankles to support her rotund body, examined the check with reverence.

"It's for you, all right. Yes sir, that's a genuine check for the full amount. Imagine having that much money all at one time! You must be careful of it, you know. You'd better put it in a bank."

"Of course!" Doris agreed, placing it inside her pocketbook. "I'll start an account tomorrow morning."

* * *

But long before morning came her plans were made to spend that money. To walk out of Klane's store and not return to it again until every penny of the five thousand was gone. Roy and Bonnie had thought she was crazy because she was always dreaming of a romantic future. What would they say now when she told them it had become a possibility—and not for herself alone With five thousand behind her, she could rescue Bonnie from the loveless marriage she was contemplating!

Bonnie, however, had different ideas. Confronted by her excited roommate when she returned that night, Bonnie admitted that she was impressed but she urged Doris to invest her money.

"I'm going to invest it," Doris explained with sparkling eyes. "I'm going to South America and you're going with me!"

Bonnie's eyes filled with tears. Bonnie was not pretty. Her features were too irregular, her expresion too bitter, but at this moment she was so touched she came close to real beauty.

"If she had the right clothes and a little fun, she'd look like a different person," Doris thought.

But Bonnie refused. When she heard the plans Doris had been concocting, she said, "Listen, kid, you're crazy! If you do half those things, your money won't last a year It's swell of you to include me—but I'm going to marry Don. Sailing to South America has no appeal for me with a war going on in Europe. I'm not anxious to get blown up by a submarine."

"They wouldn't torpedo or shoot up an American ship," Doris stated confidently.

"That's what you think. Even if they didn't, the very thought of being on a ship makes me seasick. I'm the kind that has to have solid ground under my feet. And besides, after we'd taken the trip—what?"

"Haven't you any imagination?" Doris laughed. "Anything could happen to us on the kind of ship I'm planning to take. Think what it would mean to go first-class on a luxury liner! with all the clothes we want, and plenty of money to stay at the best hotels!"

"It would make it all the harder to go back to work," Bonnie said practically. "Even five thousand dollars can't last forever. No, Doris. It's security I'm after. If I turn Don down to go with you, I'll probably lose him. And I can't afford to take a chance. Maybe I'm not a good gambler. But I've never gotten anything for nothing in my life. I could go around the world and back without getting a break."

Doris was disappointed but Bonnie's refusal made no difference in her own decision. It simply was not possible, that a girl could go through such an experience and be the same afterward. It would be worth more than four years at college. To actually see foreign countries and listen to strange languages would be an education in itself. But to be able to do it with the proper wardrobe, without consideration of the cost . . . It would be like stepping into the pages of a novel. One would become a heroine the moment one stepped upon the ship.

* * *

Five thousand dollars would be her Aladdin's lamp—making all things possible! Romance, adventure, freedom! She could have her shining hour and she would live every minute of it. Then when it was over, if it was necessary to go back to work, she would do so uncomplainingly. After all, she was young. She could always find a job. Why should she be afraid? She had it all figured out. At nineteen, the present is infinitely more important than the future.

The very next day Doris Newton quit her job. She felt like a little girl playing truant from school. It was wonderful to be able to walk leisurely down the street, to see the respect in the eyes of the bank teller when she deposited her five thousand dollars.

"I may be crazy," Doris told herself delightedly, "but if I am, I don't care."

The mood held all through the afternoon when she made her reservation on the ship leaving New York in two weeks.

"You're lucky," the travel agent said. "There's been a cancellation." He did not add that there had been many cancellations since war on the seas was looming up more daily as one of the important factors of the World war that had been checked at the English Channel. That war seemed very far away to the girl who now began to spend all her waking hours purchasing a wardrobe which would have done credit to a movie star.

Doris Newton tried on dress after dress — hundreds of dresses. She bought dozens, ignoring the price marks, intent on examining her reflected figure with a critical eye. She selected only those which "did something" for her.

There were superbly tailored sport clothes, an imported black suit, a fur jacket, and wispy evening gowns which the salesgirl assured her would be just the thing for an ocean voyage.

"Clothes certainly make a difference," Doris thought, staring at herself in a draped black silk jersey. She looked poised, luxurious, sophisticated. Like the photographs in the Sunday papers. Girls who had never had to worry where the next meal was coming from; who had never stood behind a stocking counter; who moved in that glamorous world of which Doris Newton was about to have her first glimpse.

Doris assembled her wardrobe like a general marshalling his supplies for an attack. No single detail was neglected. Fifteen pairs of shoes; ten hats; gloves and bags to match each costume. Fragile handmade blouses and the daintiest of lingerie.

And when the bills had all been paid, when she found that a hole of almost two thousand dollars had been made in her account, she did not even regret it. Better to live gloriously for as long as it lasted. At least she would have something to remember.

"You're heading for trouble," he prophesied gloomily.

* * *

They had drawn apart from Bonnie and Don for a moment and were standing with Doris's smart striped luggage piled around her—hat box and overnight bag and pullman case. Her trunk had been checked.

"You're not even listening to me," Roy complained.

"I'm sorry," Doris said, putting a half-repentant hand on his arm. "You've been sweet to me, Roy, and I appreciate it."

He stared at her reproachfully.

"Sure—and so what?"

"I'll write you from every port," she promised recklessly.

But she knew that in Roy's eyes she was spending money which could have paid for a little house, even helped to furnish it.

"But I don't want a little house . . . with Roy," she reminded herself.

"Watch out for these shipboard romances," he warned as they were joined by Bonnie and Don.

Doris laughed. "I can take care of myself."

Yet his words brought back the vision that haunted her—that had been haunting her for months. In her dreams she had pictured the deck of a ship and a man leaning the rail. He would be tall. He would have sleek black hair.

"It's almost time for the train to start," Bonnie said, putting her arms around her friend and kissing her as if she never expected to see her again.

It was time! Time to start at last on her great adventure! Doris squeezed Roy's arm and brushed the briefest of kisses against his cheek.

"Good-bye, Roy! 'Bye, Don! 'Bye Bonnie! You'll be married when I come back."

"If you come back," Roy said unhappily.

Doris left him standing there looking wistful, angry. Poor Roy. She wished he did not care so much.

But she did not look back. She pushed straight ahead through the crowded train to her section, walking head high, proudly, like a princess.

As long as she lived she would remember that first slow pull of the train, taking her upon the first stage of her journey—the low murmur of conversation and laughter; the green shades shutting out the night; the cool stiff sheets in her berth; the plump, fat pillows beneath her head.

She would never forget the next morning in New York. Grand Central station. The taxi ride to her hotel. She was moving in a dream now, living each moment as it came, storing each memory, which seemed more precious than the last.

The ship sailed at midnight.

Doris stood at the rail and watched the crowd below.

She did not mind that there was no one to tell her good-bye. She felt no sense of fear or sadness in this departure. She was leaving nothing but poverty and futility and the maddening sameness of each monotonous day.

And ahead? What was before her in the vast waters of the Atlantic? As the boat began to slip slowly away from the pier, Doris whispered, "No matter what happens to me, it will be worth it!"

THEATERS

Adopts Song.

The U. S. Naval Training station at San Diego adopted one of the songs featured in the current Ohio attraction, "In the Navy," as the official song for use by the personnel as the result of the picture being filmed at the station. Starring Bud Abbott and Lou Costello with Dick Powell the comedy with music has for one of its chief numbers, "We're In the Navy," written by Don Raye and Gene de Paul. Claire Dodd, Dick Foran and the Andrews Sisters are featured in the production which shows what happened to a crooner, Powell, upon his enlistment in the navy.

* * *

Lively Comedy.

When a salesgirl inherits a million dollars things begin to hapen in "Million Dollar Baby," showing at the Madison with Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn and Ronald Reagan in the leads. The first thing Priscilla does is create havoc in the vegetable cutter department where she is a gadget demonstrator. Then she goes beserk on a buying expedition and almost looses her friends in the general havoc. Barton MacLane and Gladys George attempt to steer the Dead End Kids along the straight path in "Hit the Road," thrilling drama of orphaned boys out to avenge their parents' murder.

* * *

Boys Town.

"Men of Boys Town" co-starring Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney continues at the Ritz. Bobs Watson, Henry O'Neill and Mary Nash are also featured in the attraction dealing with the lives of the boys introduced several years ago with practically the same cast. Roy Rogers in "Sheriff of Tombstone," is the second atraction.

* * *

O'Neill Dramas.

Four of Eugene O'Neill's one-act plays were combined to form the tense drama now showing at the Park under the title, "The Long Voyage Home." Taking place on an ammunition laden tramp steamer that is making its way through the present war zone the picture thrillingly presents the last stand of a renegade army officer to save the ship, the efforts of a Limehouse habitue to shanghai the crew, and the romance of a Swedish sailor and a bum-boat girl. John Wayne, Thomas Mitchell and Ian Hunter head the cast. Gene Autry in "The Singing Hill," is the co-feature.

STOCK LEADERS DISPLAY RISING TREND FOR DAY

Wall Street Still Confused By Berlin and Moscow Claims, But Hopes For Best.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Leading stock displayed further rising tendencies in today's market. Industrials and rails were bid up fractions to a point or so at the start. Dealings, fairly lively for a while, tapered off near the second hour.

Wide claims by the Nazis and Reds of successes in the newest European conflict left Wall Street as confused as ever anent the foreign scene but some buying was attributed to the thought the Russians might be able to stem the German push.

Boardrooms scanned the survey of the magazine "Steel" which observed that June sales volume for the majority of companies in this field was the smallest for any one month in the year to date, believed due principally to the drastic shelving of non-defense inquiries.

Interest was shown in the summary of the National Association of Manufacturers which indicated that industry is "on schedule or ahead" of governmental requirements.
